[illegible]T NIGHT the League of [illegible]tions learned that Japan and China had agreed on a "conditional truce," a temporary agreement to withdraw troops from firing lines while the head men talk it over.

The late Jerry Dunne, whom every "bad man" in New York feared, used to say, "When two men fight, they both want to run, away. If you don't want to run, you will win."

In this Asiatic fight both have seemed inclined to run, almost from the start. When China declined to lie down and be stepped on in good old "David and Goliath" style Japan felt China wasn't playing the game.

N'gi, the Washington, D. C., gorilla, suffering from pneumonia, was better yesterday, thanks to an "oxygen chamber" provided for his use by Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, editor of the Washington Herald. He ate three bananas, a pear, part of an apple, half of a grape fruit, almost a normal breakfast.

Young N'gi, although six years old, is still a baby. Gorillas, like ourselves, mature slowly. His "oxygen chamber" was a simple affair of canvas for temporary use.

His apparent recovery from pneumonia has done good by arousing interest in the use of oxygen chambers in hospitals.

Also the gorilla's recovery is a good thing for the education of children that study the strange animal with deep interest.

Mrs. Patterson, who, three years ago, gave a whole ward in the Washington Emergency Hospital, dedicated to the poor, in memory of her husband, has now given to the Washington Emergency Hospital a permanent oxygen chamber of glass, big enough to care for three persons at one time. She suggested a year ago that the Emergency Hospital should have such a chamber, but funds, apparently, were lacking. Now she gives it. A similar chamber, like those used by the Rockefeller Institute and the Mayo Brothers, has been ordered by the Children's Hospital in Washington.

In a Boston alley, a baby was found with a wash cloth over its face, a cord around its neck, black and rigid. None the less, Dr. Frank M. Deich, night superintendent of Boston City Hospital, put the baby on the operating table, and began breathing into its mouth, forcing air into its lungs. Twenty doctors took turns, forcing air into the baby's lungs, for three hours, and now the child, pronounced dead, is restored to life, breathing comfortably in an incubator.

Most interesting, all honor to the kind hearted doctors. You ask yourself: "Where was the SOUL of that baby during the three hours of apparent death? Had it not yet left the body, or was it hovering around in the neighborhood, waiting to come back in case life should start again?"

Robert P. Lamont, Jr., son of our secretary of commerce, has been invited to go to Russia and show the Soviet government how to reorganize and improve production of cattle. Young Mr. Lamont will visit Moscow to look the job over, much interested, not in the $50,000 salary said to be offered, but in the problem.

Russia, with 160,000,000 population, has 35,000,000 beef cattle, 17,000,000 sheep. This country has 65,000,000 beef cattle, 60,000,000 sheep.

Russia wisely wants her people to eat 100 pounds of meat each a year, which is the American ration.

Young Mr. Lamont raises white-faced Herefords on a 15,000-acre cattle ranch in Colorado and thinks the Russian job could be done in about 20 years.

Russia's government may be all that our "best minds" say it is, but it shows an amount of intelligence in tackling its problems not conspicuous in some other countries. When it hasn't GOT a thing, it tries to get it, and when it doesn't KNOW a thing, it tries to learn it.

An innocent Chinese, Gen. Wang Keng, thinking to visit his old American friend, Capt. William Mayer, in Shanghai, wandered by mistake into the Shanghai-Japanese consulate and was arrested.

That doesn't interest you much, but the fact that Gen. Wang Keng was graduated from West Point in 1918 does interest you.

Hospitality is beautiful, but you wonder why Chinese or anything else EXCEPT AMERICANS should be educated and graduated at West Point. For what purpose is the military school maintained?

Is it to teach the science of war to those that will defend the United States, or to mankind generally? Some Congressman might ask about that.

SMITH IN RACE IN LETTER HERE

Notice to Donahue Permits Entering of Al's Name as a Candidate

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

Al Smith is in.

He today authorized an active, aggressive campaign to be waged for him in Massachusetts for the Democratic nomination for President of the United States.

He authorized his name to be used in Massachusetts as a definite candidate for the presidential nomination.

He authorized his name to be used on the official ballot by the delegates who pledge to support him.

May Bar Coolidge as Delegate—Page 15

FULL FLEDGED CANDIDATE

He sent a power-of-attorney to be used in his behalf by Frank J. Donahue, Chairman of the Democratic State Committee.

By these acts, Smith is today a full-fledged candidate.

He has decided to begin his contest for the Presidency in the outstanding State of the northeast which stood by him four years ago, which gave him a majority over Hoover and which gave to him the most sensational demonstration in his tour of the country.

Donahue today made public the correspondence between himself and Smith which has launched the Happy Warrior into the arena of national politics again.

Donahue wrote him, in part: "You know that Massachusetts will never be content to enter a

Lowell Boy Shot by His Chum Is Dying

Lowell March 1—A bullet from a rifle in the hands of a chum passed through the head of Walter Jaserzad, 11, today while six boys were target shooting in the cellar of the victim's home in Mt. Vernon st.

Jaserzad was rushed to St. Joseph's Hospital where no hope was held for his recovery. Police said Eugene Davis, 13, of Roberts st., was firing at the target when Jaserzad stepped in the line of the shot.

Third Youth Seized in $1200 Holdup

Fred Smith, 19, of Elm st., Charlestown, was arrested today as the alleged third member of the trio that snatched $1200 from Timothy Burns, chain store executive, in Charlestown on Feb. 16.

The pair previously arrested, Ronald Sweeney, 19 of Romsey st., and George N. Whelan, 27, of Neponset ave., both Dorchester, were held for the grand jury when arraigned on larceny charges in Charlestown court.

BALANCES AND RECEIPTS

Washington, March 1—Today's treasury balance, $431,140,252; U. S. customs receipts, $21,650,388.

BIG SHAKEUP TO HIT POLICE

A new Boston police shakeup which, it is understood, will be sweeping, but with few if any superior officers affected, will be announced tonght at rollcall in general orders, to become effective tomorrow.

The greatest secrecy prevailed at headquarters over the shakeup, but it was learned that every division in the department will feel the readjustment.

Also it is understood there will be no promotions announced in the general order.

Police Commissioner Hultman has been scheduled to leave Boston Thursday for a vacation cruise in southern waters, to return on March 21, and it had been expected he would make one more readjustment in personnel before leaving.

NAB SUSPECT IN FURIOUS FIGHT

Trapped by a letter from his sweetheart, George Albert Pettit, 43, of Williamsport, Pa., was captured today in the State st. postoffice after a furious struggle with three Williamsport detectives.

Pettit, declared by the detectives to have looted nearly every home in the exclusive section of Williamsport of booty to the value of $50,000, had the same tear gas gun on him when captured that he used only a few days ago to blind one of today's captors.

He attempted to pull out the fountain pen gun during the struggle, which was viewed by an excited throng in the postoffice corridors, but one of the three detectives kicked it out of his hand.

All three detectives were on the floor, with Pettit pinned beneath them when he gave up the battle.

The three detectives, Frederick Seitler, Joseph Schumacher and Albert Beck, arrived in Boston Sunday and had been watching the general delivery window ever since, waiting for Pettit to call for a letter from his Williamsport sweetheart.

Moran Candidate for Maine Post

Rockland, Me., March 1—Edward C. Moran, Jr., titular head of the Democratic party in Maine and twice candidate for governor, has announced his candidacy for the party's nomination for United States representative from the Second District.

Rep. John E. Nelson of Augusta, incumbent, has not yet announced his candidacy for re-election.

China-Jap Truce Plan Accepted

By Arno Dosch-Fleurot
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Geneva, March 1 (INS)—Representatives of Japan and China announced today that their respective governments had accepted the League of Nations Council's plan for an armistice conference to end hostilities in Shanghai.

Naotake Sato, Japanese delegate, and Dr. W. W. Yen, representative of China, announced that their governments were willing to participate in the armistice conference, but both reserved full liberty of action and declined to commit themselves to any promises in advance.

The League's proposal, concurred in by the United States, called upon Japan to promise not to infringe upon the territorial and political sovereignty of China, and demanded that China fully protect international interests in Shanghai and safeguard the International Settlement.

Admiral Shiosawa was aboard his flagship Ataka at the time of the explosion, but put off immediately for the Idzumo, receiving me on the quarterdeck in the absence of Admiral Nomura.

"These mines, or depth charges, do not appear to have been home-made affairs, but regular manufactured instruments of destruction. Their explosion was marked by a column of smoke which rose 60 feet in the air.

"The enormous eruption, like a waterspout, sent a tidal wave across the river, rocking all craft and upsetting small boats.

"The flagship Idzumo suffered no damage, and the only things destroyed on board the

Claim Chinese Hurled Back in Terrific Smash to Beat Truce Plan; Bombs Menace Ships

BULLETIN

Nanking, China, March 1 (AP)—Wang Ching-Wei, Premier of China, declared in a speech at Loyang today that China "must resist to the end at Shanghai for its national existence."

The government, he said, is ardently supporting the 19th route army defending Shanghai.

In government circles reports of elaborate Japanese preparations fo renewal of the attack overshadowed interest in the peace parleys going on at Shanghai.

Shanghai, China, Wednesday, March 2 (AP)—Hammered by the new strength of Japan's fresh storm troops, the Chinese line in the Kiangwan sector gave way early this morning and fell back, foot by foot, covering the retreat with machine gun fire.

The whole Japanese line along the entire battlefront between Kiangwan and Miaochung was straightened out and headquarters reported the attack had succeeded along a one-mile front.

The Chinese were retreating southward in the direction of Chapei.

200 DEAD IN ONE SPOT

At one cross roads which has been under heavy fire for several days, the advancing Japanese reported they had found more than 200 Chinese dead.

Their own casualties for the day were not given.

The peace parleys which began on Monday virtually were at a standstill this morning, neutral observers said.

There were several night conferences among Chinese officials, the

JAPAN AGREES TO TRUCE PARLEY BUT WILL FIGHT ON

CHINESE ARMY MUST QUIT OR BE WIPED OUT, SAYS TOKIO

Tokio, March 1—"It is impossible for the Japanese to suspend military operations in Shanghai despite the armistice negotiations under way in Shanghai and Geneva," Minister of War Sadao Araki declared today.

Shortly before the war minister made this declaration the foreign office had indicated there was no hope for immediate results from the present peace attempts, declaring simultaneous withdrawal of Chinese and Japanese armies from Shanghai would not be considered.

Mamoru Shigemitsu, Japanese minister to China, was given further instructions as to what Japan wanted, so he could carry the truce negotiations further.

"DRIVE MUST GO ON"

The foreign office indicated it was impossible to suspend the drive as long as the army intended to push back the Chinese 12½ miles from the Settlement boundaries.

"The Chinese have broken past promises," War Minister Araki said, "and might use the truce to consolidate their military positions, a move that would require still more troops from Japan.

"Diplomatic negotiations should parallel military actions. When the Chinese withdraw in compliance with our ultimatum, we will withdraw. We will not do it simultaneously.

"Municipal police would guard the proposed neutral zone, of third parties.

"Our army will not retire until the Chinese Nineteenth route army has been annihilated or withdrawn."

FRENCH PLAN ACCEPTED

Meantime it was announced the Japanese government had accepted in principle the peace proposals made by Joseph Paul-Boncour, French delegate at the League of Nations Council meeting in Geneva yesterday.

This proposal was that a conference be held at Shanghai by the Chinese, Japanese and representatives of the neutral powers.

The Japanese government was understood to have interpreted M. Paul-Boncour's suggestions as meaning that a conference at Shanghai, covering a long period of time, would seek a permanent solution of the problem there.

It was understood instructions would be sent to M. Sato at Geneva, advising him to accept the Paul-Boncour proposals.

LOOKS FOR FIGHT TO END

In government circles, however, was asserted that the conferences at Shanghai seemed to be making very little progress toward arranging for a cessation of hostilities.

Additional strengthening of the Japanese army at Shanghai was expected to put an early end to the discussion of the evacuation question.

In official quarters it was stated that a decisive victory for Gen. Shirakawa's forces was expected to bring the fighting at Shanghai to an early close, thereby producing the conditions under which M. Paul-Boncour's proposed conference could be established.

An emergency bond issue to finance Japan's military campaign in China was discussed at a cabinet session today and virtually approved, but members of the privy council demanded it be submitted to an extra session of the diet for decision.

Manchuria is Japan's "lifeline," Premier Inukai told the League of Nations Manchurian commission at a luncheon here today.

"You must take this into consideration, else it is impossible to grasp the origin of our conflict with China," he said.

Representatives of the emperor, cabinet members, bankers and Chamber of Commerce officials attended the luncheon.

Americans to Quit New Danger Zone

Shanghai, March 1 (AP)—Americans living along the railway lines which the Japanese have threatened to bombard to prevent movement of Chinese reinforcements were advised today by Edwin S. Cunningham, the consul-general, to evacuate.

In their warning to Mayor Wu Teh-Chen yesterday the Japanese said they would begin operations tomorrow to destroy the railway lines. There are more than 60 Americans in Soochow, but this is considered outside the danger area.

CANTONESE TO 'DECLARE WAR'

Tokio, March 1 (INS)—The Cantonese government in China is preparing to declare war on Japan in order to assist the 19th Route Army in its defense of Shanghai, the Ministry of Marine announced today.

The Cantonese government, exercising sovereignty over southern China independent of the Nationalist regime at Nanking and Loyang, was established during the height of civil war strife in China several years ago. Numerous efforts have been made to amalgamate the Cantonese and Nationalist factions, and temporary success was achieved last fall when Eugene Chen, one of the Cantonese leaders, accepted the post of foreign minister in the reorganized Nationalist government after the resignation of President Chiang Kai-Shek. Efforts to bring about complete union between the two factions, however, have been unavailing.

The News in part said:

"Does he come to combat science, to deny wonders of astronomy, of geology, of Evolution? If he comes with these things he will have a lonely time at Yale."

Alien Ban Favored in Apportionment

Washington, March 1 (AP)—The Sparks resolution for a Constitutional amendment to exclude aliens in apportionment of Representatives among the states was approved today by the House judiciary committee by a 12 to 7 vote.

The resolution is identital with one reported to the last House, which failed of action. The committee added an amendment requiring ratification in seven years.

PEACE HOPES FADE IN CAPITAL

Washington, March 1 (INS)—The prospects of peace which shone through the war clouds for a few brief hours apparently had receded further than ever away today, and the American government settled back to its "wait and see" policy, pending further developments in the Far East.

Coincident with the practical rejection of the peace parleys by both Chinese and Japanese, and the landing of large Japanese forces at Liuho, far up the Yangtse river on a new front, ten more American warships passed through the Panama Canal to join the powerful armada the United States already has concentrated in the Pacific.

In contrast to the hopes for peace held out just 24 hours ago, complications around Shanghai, in Manchuria, and along the Siberian border appeared to be developing so rapidly today that officials here admitted almost any eventuality may materialize within the next 62 hours.

Heretofore this government has not believed that Soviet Russia desired to become involved in the Sino-Japanese quarrel, but with the uneasiness caused in Moscow by Japan's military activities in North Manchuria and the setting up of an "independent" Manchurian government, together with Japan's major military commitments around Shanghai, it would not be surprising if the Soviets took definite military steps to check Japan in the north.

Japs Invade China In New Landing Spot

By FLOYD GIBBONS

(Copyright, 1932, by International News Service)

Shanghai, March 1 (INS)—The Japanese are landing new troops and new supplies in quantity on the Yangtze river north of the Woosung forts at a place near Liuho, which I described to you in dispatches three weeks ago.

At that time the Japanese military envelopment plan from that direction was abandoned on account of the unexpected Chinese resistence in the Whangpoo area.

I have just received confidential information that at 11 o'clock this morning six Japanese cruisers, eight destroyers and two troopships were in the Yangtze river above the Whangpoo and were lying off the mouth of a small stream entering the Yangtze river in the vicinity of Liuho village.

There are no docking facilities there as in the Whangpoo, and the Japanese were seen to be using small boats to transport the troops and supplies ashore.

The landing was accomplished under guard of naval guns and several squadrons of heavy bombing planes.

Liuho is located 25 miles to the northwest of Shanghai, with which it is conected by an excellent moor road. If the Japanese forces are able to consolidate positions occupied by their landing forces this morning at Liuho, they bring a new threat of pressure almost in the rear of the Chinese army, and will increase the menace on the American lines at the north boundary of the International Settlement if the Japanese pressure forces the Chinese to retreat in that direction.

The landing of these forces at Liuho changes the entire status of the fighting around Shanghai. Liuho is far beyond the defenses of the International Settlement—it is even many miles beyond the reach of the 20 kilometer radius from which the Japanese demanded the Chinese to withdraw.

Japanese hostilities for the past month, based on military forces landed in the International Settlement, have been insistently described by the Japanese as measures necessary for the defense of Japanese property and nationals in the International Settlement.

For these reasons Japan declared her military operations did not constitute war on China, but this morning's landing at Liuho on the upper Yangyze river is an entirely different thing.

In the absence of any defensive claim by the Japanese, this attack from the new direction will be represented by the Chinese as being clearly an invasion of Chinese territory, a violation of China's territorial sovereignty and consequently a repudiation by Japan of the Kellogg pact.

GIBBONS TELLS OF PERILS IN BOMBING JAP WARSHIPS

By FLOYD GIBBONS

cruiser Oyi were several wine glasses in the officers' mess.

"The first explosion occurred at five minutes after 1. The mine was located about 90 feet off the starboard side of the cruiser Oyi, which was buoyed in midstream, a half-mile down the river from the Idzumo. The shock of the explosion rocked the cruiser, but hurt nothing.

"The second explosion occurred at 1:25 p. m. The mine appears to have been anchored about 50 feet off our stern, right over there."

The admiral pointed across the mouth of Soochow creek in the direction of a point on which are located Shanghai's public gardens in front of the British consulate. There was a tremendous upheaval of water, but it did not damage the ship.

Bombs Set Close

Blast Sends Tidal Wave Across the River

"Secret infromation had reached me several days ago through the Japanese naval intelligence section," the admiral went on, "that these attempts were being planned by the Chinese, but of course we were unaware of the time—we only knew we must ever be on the watch.

"Both mines were anchored upstream from the sterns of both thee Oyi and Idzumo, and I believe that their time fuses were set so they would explode shortly after noon today when the ebb-tide would be flowing out, swinging the mines on their anchors closer toward the sterns of the destined victims."

And that, boys and girls, seems to be the last official statement, although John Goétte (International News Service staff correspondent) tells me that Mayor Wu of Shanghai says the Chinese have no official knowledge of the incident beyond reports of witnesses.

Karl H. von Wiegand (Universal Service correspondent) probably was the closest American witness to the explosion of the mine near the Idzumo. He was having luncheon in the German consulate at the time, about a hundred yards distant from the flagship.

This is Von Wiegand's story:

"I was lunching with the German consul general in the German consulate a hundred feet from the Idzuma when the building suddenly rocked as if in a big earthquake.

"We ran out of the building and on the side of the Idzuma saw a big black spot on the water.

"There was great excitement aboard ship. They appeared to be loading guns and at the same time running up signal flags. My first impression was that a powder magazine had blown up on the other side of the river."

The International Settlement police spotted it at first as an earthquake.

Remember the Maine!

Danger of Repetition of Horror of '98 Looms

It was a mighty luck escape for both the Idzumo and the Oyi, but that isn't worrying me half as much as the terrible thought that downstream a mile and a half from where these mines were anchored, one of Uncle Sam's greatest battle cruisers rides at ancohr—the Houston, Admiral Montgomery Taylor's flagship of the Asiatic squadron.

Gosh, surpose either one of those mines had broken loose from their submarine moorings and had floated downstream with this afternoon's tide in the direction of the Houston—or, for that matter, in the direction of half a dozen American destroyers and mine-sweepers, not to mention any number of commercial craft, including the out-going President Polk, round the world liner, loaded down with American tourists.

I hate to think of such possibilities.

And listen, Jimmy, I happen to remember that little yarn spun for you about two weeks ago—let me see, it was on the 15th of last month, the 34th anniversary of the blowing up of the Maine in Havana harbor.

Look back in your clippings, Jimmy, and see if you can find that story—I don't want to scare you, but, gosh, it certainly scared me at noon today.

And right this blessed minute I am asking every blessed Chinese official I can get in contact with whether there are any more of those mines in the river right now.

I know it's just as easy to plant or float down a dozen more as it was the two that went off two hours ago. We don't want any Maine incident on the Whang-Poo.

last of them breaking up at 1:00 a. m., but they produced no definite results. The Chinese appeared to agree that the military demands made upon them by the enemy are as unacceptable now as when they were framed in Gen. Uveda's ultimatum some days ago?

DETERMINED TO FIGHT

Gen. Tsai Ting-Kai, the Chinese commander, knows that heavy Japanese reinforcements are on hand but he has let it be known that he is still determined to fight it out even against an army with greater numbers and better equipment.

Japanese officials late Tuesday afternoon claimed the entire Chinese line from Chapei northward through the western environs of Kiangwan to Miaochangchen was driven backward by their forces in the most terrific battle the Shanghai front has seen.

Backed up by 12,000 reinforcements who landed hered uring the last 36 hours, and in the midst of truce talk the Japanese today began a tremendous assault along the whole front.

They used artillery, airplanes, machine guns anda squadron of tanks in the tremendous push which Tokio expected to defeat the Chinese sooner than League of Nations peace proposals could become operative.

TRY TO MINE SHIPS

A terrific explosion which shook the entire city of Shanghai without being clearly heard, took place when two mines blew up close by two Japanese warships in the Whangpoo river. Inhabitants of the International Settlement rushed into the streets, screaming that an earthquake, something which happens in Shanghai only once in a decade, had struck.

The Japanese lines struck with fury unknown heretofore in the conflict, their tanks dashing backward and forward like maddened monsters. They said they had achieved an advance of more than a mile.

The claim was made from the newly established headquarters of Gen. Yoshinori Shirakawa at the Kungdah cotton mill just outside the eastern extremity settlement where Gen. Kenkichi Uyeda maintained his headquarters until the beginning of the Kiangwan battle on the morning of Feb. 20.

More than 700 wounded Chinese were brought back from the front lines into the crowded settlement hospitals up to late this afternoon, and the ambulances continued a steady trek to and from the battlefields.

Late tonight the rumble of artillery fire and the cracks of the rifles still set up a terrific din along the entire front. As evening approached the firing was concentrated on the Chinese left wing, south of Kiangwan. A spokesman for the Japanese intimated that their casualties also had been very heavy. A Japanese colonel and a captain, he said, were killed by machine gun fire in assaulting Chinese trenches.

Shrapnel brust all along the line. The howitzers belched fire with resounding booms and great smoke rings sailed skyward. Underneath it all was the steady rat-tat-tat of machine guns and rifles.

A fruitless attempt to blow up two Japanese warships in the Whangpoo river today resulted in an afternoon of terror for the International Settlement as the most spectacular battle of the season of hostilities raged along the line from Chapel to Kiangwan.

Two powerful mines exploded near the flagship Iduzmo and the Japanese cruiser Oi in the river early this afternoon and caused hundreds of dwellers in the International Settlement to rush from their homes screaming "earthquake!" the warships were not damaged

The explosions rocked buildings throughout the city. Shortly afterward a party of Japanese sailors left the flagship in an armed launch, proceeded a short distance and down river arrested six Chinese in two sampans.

They were accused of being connected with the explosion.

SHANGHAI SEES WAR EXTENDED

By JOHN GOETTE

Shanghai, March 1 (INS)—Peace negotiations between Japanese and Chinese officials, with neutral power representatives looking on anxiously, continued today to the accompaniment of terrific gunfire and aerial bombardment of Chinese positions.

Both sides seemed pessimistic, although neither commented on the terms being considered, and foreigners realized the fighting was much more real at present than the peace parleys.

The Chinese, through Finance Minister T. V. Soong, denied an armistice had been agreed upon. The Japanese, he said, are not agreeable to the terms to which the Chinese are willing to accede.

The Japanese minister to China, Mamoru Shigemitsu, declared the peace negotiations were private and indirect, stating that no decision had been reached. He awaited further orders from Tokio.

Japanese circles believe that the Japanese army has a better chance of driving the Chinese Nineteenth route army out of the Shanghai truce area than have the truce makers, while neutral observers, seeing further attacks, feel assured the Chinese will continue their stubborn resistance and prolong the conflict.

Mrs. Gann Confined to Home With Bronchitis

Washington, Mar. 1—Mrs. Edward E. Gann, sister of Vice-President Curtis, will be confined to her home with bronchitis for several days on orders of her physician, Dr. George W. Claver.

Mrs. Dolly Gann

The bronchial attack developed from a slight cold which Mrs. Gann neglected to treat because of its apparent inconsequence. It grew worse quickly, congesting the lungs.

Although Mrs. Gann will not be allowed to leave her house, and must stay in bed most of the time, Dr. Claver said there was no indication the ailment would develop into more serious trouble.

Senator Hastings Favors Unseating of Bankhead

Washington, March 1—Recommendation that Sen. John J. Bankhead of Alabama be unseated is contained in a report prepared by Chairman Hastings of the Senate elections sub committee which is considering the contest against Bankhead's election.

Sen. Bankhead

Hastings' recommendation came after hearing charges of widespread violations of election laws in Alabama's 1930 senatorial contest.

In a previous report Hastings charged that not one single voting place in the whole state had fully complied with the election laws and stated he was sure "some fraud had been committed."

The report will be submitted to the subcommittee this week for approval, before it goes to the full committee and then the Senate.

They appeared today as prosecution witnesses at a hearing presided over by Capt. Hermann Katzschmar of the Coast Guard.

DEATH URGED IN HONOLULU FOR ATTACKERS OF WOMEN

GOVERNOR IS AROUSED BY OUTRAGES

Honolulu, March 1 (US)—The Honolulu police department was still baffled today in the attempt to capture the dark-skinned man who Saturday robbed and attacked Mrs. Kathleen Hope, Australian wife of a petty officer in the United States Navy. He is en route to the mainland aboard a submarine.

Nearly a dozen suspects gathered in the underworld dragnet provided alibis sufficiently airtight to establish their innocence of the crime. Two others are held, but Chief Weeber is not inclined to believe that either one is the bandit.

Death for the assailant of Mrs. Hope was advocated today by Gov. Lawrence M. Judd.

"I cannot express too strongly my abhorrence of the awful crime of Saturday night," he continued. I would not hesitate for an instant to sign the death warrant for the perpetrator of such a cowardly and dastardly assault.

"I shall use all the influence within my power to see that the perpetrators of criminal assault are given the maximum penalty within the law."

Mrs. Hope continued to improve today. Nervous shock resulting from the attack was gradually wearing off. She is making her home temporarily at the neighboring bungalow of Mrs. Curry, who also was visited by the thug previous to the attack.

THIRD MISSING STUDENT IS 'MARRIED'

Dormitory mates of a third Harvard student, admitted by college authorities as missing for two weeks, disclose today that a short time ago, he said he had been secretly married.

This statement by the missing youth, his dormitory mates said, was made after a previous disappearance of several days.

Believing he was playing a joke on them, they "kidded" him, they said today, but he insisted he was serious, although not disclosing the girl's name, nor the time and place of the marriage.

News of the youth's disappearance, the third within a month at the University, was not reported to college officials until last night, it was learned. Although the youth had not been seen around the University for two weeks, it was believed he was at home, until a checkup there revealed that he was missing.

His disappearance, coming closely on the still unsolved disappearance of Nathaniel Jones of Billerica, and Floyd Stewart of Garden City, Kan., business school students, on Jan. 31, has thrown the student body into an uproar.

College officials refuse to divulge the name of the missing youth. It was revealed that he was in poor scholastic standing and was to be placed on probation Monday.

The youth's roommate informed officials the student had about $200 at the time he left Winthrop House, a dormitory at Mill st. and Memorial Drive, Cambridge.

Prof. Ronald M. Ferry, master of Winthrop House, said early today that no special check was kept on students, but that as far as he knew none had been reported missing. Dean A. C. Hanford stated that he had received no facts in the case.

NEW ATTACK SPURS 'HONOR' DEFENSE

Gladys Glad and Hellinger Come to Parting of the Ways

Gladys Glad, "the most beautiful showgirl in the world," who has filed suit for divorce from Mark Hellinger, Broadway columnist, on grounds on incompatibility. The couple, wed in 1929, announced they had agreed to disagree.

145 SIGNED UP FOR WET VOTE

Washington, March 1 (AP)—A House vote on consideration of a state and local liquor control plan was assured today when the wet blocs obtained the necessary 145 signatures on a petition to take the measure away from the judiciary committee.

The first day on which it will be possible to bring the suggested constitutional amendment up for a vote will be March 14.

A Texas Democrat, Rep. Mansfield, was the 145th House member to sign. Seated in the wheel chair he uses because of paralysis, he rolled into the well of the House, and signed the petition while Rep. Blanton (D., Texas), and Rep. Laguardia (R., N. Y.), were discussing the fact that it had been on file since last Thursday.

Rep. Sabath (D.) Illinois, signed the petition as the House convened today, making the 140th signer, and, next, Rep. Montague (D.), Virginia, signed. Rep. Foss (R.), Massachusetts, signed last night, being the 139th. This was not divulged until today.

Drysdale Sent Back ts China Attache

Washington, March 1 (AP)—Lieut.-Col. Walter S. Drysdale, now in Tientsin, China, has been designated military attache to China, succeeding Lieut.-Col. Nelson E. Margetts, who has been relieved from duty in Peiping because of illness. Lieut.-Col. Drysdale served as military attache to China from 1917 to 1921.

GLADYS GLAD IN DIVORCE PLEA

New York, March 1 (US)—Mark Hellinger, Broadway columnist and Gladys Glad, "most beautiful showgirl in the world," have "agreed to disagree."

Attorneys for Miss Glad have filed divorce proceedings in Nogales, Mexico, charging incompatibility. Late last night, Hellinger in Pittsburgh and Miss Glad in Cleveland confirmed the suit.

Hellinger, co-author of the new Ziegfeld show "Hot-Cha" playing in Pittsburgh, said:

"She's the greatest kid in the whole world. I won't contest this suit. I hope we remain friends for life."

Miss Glad playing with the Follies in Cleveland, over the long-distance telephone said:

"We agreed to disagree. We're still the best of friends. Mark and I talked it over and decided it was the best thing to do. We shall remain friends."

Hellinger and Miss Glad were married in June, 1929. They became acquainted in Atlantic City when the columnist, as a judge in a beauty contest, picked his future wife as the winner.

BANKER HALE LOSES FIGHT FOR RE-TRIAL

Concord, N. H., March 1—Arthur H. Hale, 72, Manchester bank treasurer and church deacon, lost his year-long fight against jail sentence today when the State Supreme Court upheld the conviction and overruled his exceptions on guilty findings for bank defalcations.

Hale was treasurer of the Merrimac River Savings Bank from 1899 until its closing two years ago.

He was convicted a year ago on 49 counts of misappropriation of funds that totalled nearly $3,000,000.

After 11 weeks trial, the longest criminal trial in the history of New Hampshire, his counsel carried the fight through the various courts to the final defeat today.

Davis resigned his office yesterday in anticipation of today's announcement by the court. The decision was arrived at them, but not made public until today.

Francis W. Johnson of Claremont, appointed to succeed Davis, announced today that his office will move for sentence of Hale within a few days.

Hale, in addition to his position with the bank, was deacon of the Franklin st. Baptist church in Manchester and was prominent in civic affairs.

6 RESCUED MEN SAY LIGHTS WERE ON

A Coast Guard board of investigation convened aboard the cutter Acushnet today upon its arrival at the navy yard, with the rescued crew of the four-master schooner George W. Elzey, Jr., to fix the blame in the sinking of the schooner by the government vessel.

Captain and crew of the schooner hurled charges at their rescuers, declaring all their lights were burning at the time of the crash, and that they even burned flares when they saw the Acushnet bearing down.

The Acushnet crew charges that the schooner, without lights, was running in the main ship channel.

The schooner was rammed Saturday night in Nantucket Sound near Cross Rip lightship and sank in 15 minutes.

The coast guard craft rammed the sailing vessel while on its usual mercy patrol off the coast, ready to aid ships in distress.

The Elzey was proceeding without cargo from St. John, N. B., to her home port in New York.

Capt. Harry Kroeger, Mate Hans M. Hansen, Oscar Ottoson, steward, James O'Shaughnesy, James Donohue and Allan Caterson were the rescued men. Ottoson's home is in Philadelphia. The others live in New York.

GARNER BLOCKS 'GAG' ON TAX BILL DEBATE

Washington, March 1 (INS)—Banishing all "gag" rules in consideration of the proposed new $1,100,000,000 tax increase bill, Speaker Garner of the House today said ample opportunity for debate and amendments would be given.

Following a conference with Acting Chairman Crisp (D.), Georgia, of the Ways and Means Committee, Garner said he hoped the bill would be completed this week.

"The fullest opportunity will be given for debating the measure in accordance with the policy of the Democratic leadership to see that the House has plenty of time for consideration of legislation," said Garner.

The sales tax sub-committee, having already tentatively agreed on a sales tax plan to raise between $500,000,000 and $600,000,000, continued its work today. Another sub-committee considered means of stopping "loop holes" in the present law.

TO RAISE $600,000,000

The bill will call for about $1,350,000,000 additional taxes. The sales tax was estimated to raise slightly less than $600,000,000, with the rate of tax 2 per cent.

The various sub-committees of the ways and means committee today had agreed upon rates and sources of revenue to bring to the treasury within $100,000,000 of the amount necessary to balance the budget by 1933, Crisp said.

Tomorrow, some article will be added to the excise tax list to obtain this $100,000,000, he added.

The sales tax sub-committee, headed by Rep. Rainey (D.) of Illinois, agreed upon several articles upon which special excise taxes will be imposed. He did not announce the selections, but it was believed domestic consumers of electricity will be called upon to pay an additional 5 per cent levy on their bills.

FANCY FOODS HIT

As tentatively agreed upon by the Rainey sub-committee, the sales tax will not apply "on food that the average man uses," Crisp said. The "poor man's breakfast" will not be taxed, he warned.

So-called fancy foods will be hit. Many articles of food that are processed or manufactured will be taxed. Specifically exempt from the sales tax are tea, sugar, coffee, bread, raw meat and all dairy products. Clothing will be taxed.

The sales tax will not be paid on component parts of any article; only upon the completed or assembled product when it is ready for consumption, and at the time of first sale by the manufacturer.

The cornerstone of the program will be heavy income taxes and a manufacturers sales tax.

Income tax rates will be increased all along the line, with the maximum surtax probably reaching 42 per cent on incomes over $500,000, the figure recommended by the Treasury.

Death duties will be increased and a gift tax levied to prevent evasion of the estate tax.

Thief to Die if He Eats Stolen Sheep

Charleroi, Pa., March 1 (AP)—Police are looking for the miscreant who stole a sheep from the Charleroi-Monessen Hospital. The sheep had been innoculated with cancer germs in a laboratory test, and if the thief eats it he will die.

TOO BIG, EVEN FOR GARNER

Miss Josephine Sterling, comely stenographer, has found a use for this huge gavel presented to her employer, Speaker John N. Garner, by friends in Texas. She finds it a comfortable seat from which to view parades, celebrations, etc., in Capitol Plaza. Garner broke one gavel in the House, hence this new one. It must remain an ornament, however, for it would take a giant to lift it. It was given him by Joe E. Pate of Hidalgo with the following message: "You might use it to knock down the tariff wall and also some of our Republican friends' ears. (International Newsreel photo.)

OFFER NEW BILL FOR CASH BONUS

Washington, March 1 (INS)—A new bill, proposing immediate cash payment of the soldiers' bonus along with a bond issue to raise the necessary revenue, was introduced in the Senate today by Senator Thomas (D.) of Oklahoma.

He said about $1,250,000,000 would be required to pay off the bonus in cash. Thomas declared the bill would help restore prosperity by increasing the purchasing power of the people, creating new markets and making money more plentiful.

"It will serve to cause merchants to place orders to replenish their empty shelves," said Thomas, "and such orders will react on wholesalers, factories, producers of raw materials, and on each and every class of wage earners."

Washington, March 1 (AP)—Postmaster-General Brown today appointed Frank L. Lanes as acting postmaster in Concord, N. H.

PROBE OF BULL, BEAR ORDERED

Washington, March 1 (AP)—A Senate banking committee today appointed a sub-committee to draft a resolution authorizing complete investigation of the stock exchanges.

Senator Walcott (R.) Connecticut, who had led the administration drive for an investigation of bear raids on the market, was named chairman.

Chairman Norbeck of the banking committee announced after a lengthy executive session that it was "the consensus of the committee to go into the abuses on the stock exchanges."

Sen. Glass, of Virginia; Barkley, of Kentucky, Democrats, and Blain (R., Wis.), proposed that bulls be investigated as well as bears.

BRAKE APPLIED TO ROOSEVELT CAMPAIGN

By GEORGE R. HOLMES

Washington, March 1 (INS)—Franklin D. Roosevelt's candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination, which up to a month ago was spreading with something like prairie fire rapidity, has been checked on a number of fronts.

Instead of being able to maintain their offensive, supporters of the New York Governor have been forced into a defensive role in some widely separate sections of the country where they had anticipated little difficulty in corralling delegates.

This applies particularly to New England, where friends of Alfred E. Smith are busy in his behalf and to some sections of the South and West where the movement for Speaker John N. Garner has attained a momentum that has both surprised and alarmed the Roosevelt lieutenants.

HE'S LEADING, BUT—

There is no question but that the New York Governor is still far in the lead in the number of convention delegates in sight, but there is also no question but that the brakes have been applied to his progress in no uncertain way.

A week from today in New Hampshire the candidacies of Roosevelt and Smith meet head on in the first primary test. The outcome is awaited with intense interest by Democratic leaders in Washington.

A month ago it appeared Roosevelt would have the New Hampshire delegation by default. Smith's announcement that he was willing to be drafted for renomination changed all that, and instead of easy victory the Roosevelt people now have a real fight on their hands.

SMITH FORCES ACTIVE

Vermont presents about the same picture as New Hampshire, and in varying degree so do the other New England states, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Maine and Rhode Island. Throughout New England the Smith forces are active and are carrying the war to the Roosevelt people.

In the South, where the Roosevelt strength has been greatest, where his managers have confidently expected 100 per cent delegations, there are also appearing signs of defection.

A typical example was furnished yesterday in Alabama, where there had been little thought of other than a Roosevelt delegation. Representative John McDuffie, Democratic whip of the House of Representatives, announced for Garner.

While McDuffie, of course, does not control the Alabama delegation he is not without considerable influence in his district and state, and it is known that his indorsement of the Texan is shared by several other members of the Alabama congressional delegation.

GARNER GAINS

The serious factor from the Roosevelt standpoint is that the Garner movement thus far is taking strength away from Roosevelt almost alone.

The North and East thus far have adopted a watchful waiting policy where the Garner candidacy is concerned, while pushing the candidacy of Smith, whom few believe can or will be nominated at Chicago.

The acquisitions to the Garner candidacy are coming from Roosevelt territory in the South and West.

Democratic leaders today were inclined to attached little significance to Roosevelt's dealings with what is commonly called "the Tammany mess." Roosevelt removed Sheriff Tom Farley, but he appointed yesterday a Tammany leader, John E. Sheehy, to succeed him. Sheehy was one of the two men endorsed by John F. Curry, leader of Tammany Hall, so it was a Tammany appointment. This about evens the matter up, according to opinions expressed here today.

But it also indicates, incidentally, that Gov. Roosevelt is not "going to war" with Tammany.

Porto Ricans 'Strike' Against Sales Tax

San Juan, P. R., March 1 (AP)—One thousand merchants of San Juan closed up shop today and held a meeting of protest against imposition of a two per cent sales tax.

The city took on a Sunday like appearance with most of the retail stores and banks closed.

Campbell Leaves Florida

Daytona Beach, Fla., March 1—Sir Malcolm Campbell, British race driver who established new automobile speed records here, will leave today for Toronto, Canada.

Man Enters Jail 14 Years After He Is Given Sentence

Springfield, Ill., March 1 (AP)—Fourteen years having elapsed since Joseph Young was sentenced, the authorities decided that it was about time to put him in the Illinois reformatory.

Superintendent John R. Cranor of the Pontiac, Ill., reformatory advised Atty. Gen. Oscar E. Carlstrom that Young was sentenced on Dec. 16, 1918, but did not reach the institution until Feb. 4, 1932.

Young was 20 when sentenced. Now he is 34.

ASK TO PROTECT U.S. LOBSTERS

Washington, March 1 (AP)—A plan for protection of the domestic lobster fishing industry against Canadian competition was laid today before the Senate commerce committee.

Senators White and Hale and Rep. Nelson, all Maine Republicans, strongly urged the Nelson-White bill prohibiting importation of lobsters from Canada smaller than the legal length fixed by Maine.

Sen. Hale told the committee the domestic lobster industry was "faced with destruction unless it gets relief." He described existing conditions as "intolerable" because of competition from Canadian fishermen.

Sen. Copeland asked if the bill "in the last analysis" didn't seek "to place an embargo on Canadian short lobsters?"

White replied the purpose was to protect against sale in the United States of lobsters "of a size illegal if caught in the United States waters and against state laws."

Poked Her Because She Won at Poker

Chicago, March 1 (INS)—First she won a pot when she held a straight flush over his full house. A few hands later he dropped out, holding three aces, to find she had bluffed him on a pair of deuces.

Because she was a better poker player, he poked her and knocked her across the room, Mrs. Dorothy Parsons alleges in a divorce suit.

MALDEN MAN OFFERS TO WED FREED GIRL

His admiration for Mrs. Eleanor Johnson Waterville, Me., Negress, acquitted of the murder of Abraham Levine, and his willingness to marry her, were revealed today by Clarence A. Atkinson, former Malden resident.

Atkinson, who is 35, is a widower and is reported to be wealthy. He is at present living in an exclusive summer camp near Montpelier and formerly resided in Eastern ave., Malden.

DENOUNCED BY FAMILY

His willingness to make Mrs. Johnson his wife brought a storm of criticism upon him from members of his family, relatives and friends, it was reported from Montpelier.

Mrs. Johnson, who is staying with friends in Waterville, learned of Atkinson's proposal late last night and received the news with a hearty laugh. She gave little indication that she would take the matter seriously.

Atkinson made his first declaration yesterday morning when he called at the Montpelier post office for his mail. Hearing discussion of the case, he joined in and expressed his willingness to marry Mrs. Johnson. He declared he had been an admirer of Mrs. Johnson, believed she had received a great deal of rough treatment, and was delighted that she had been acquitted.

EASY TO LOVE

Today he expressed surprise at the criticism resulting from his declaration. He admitted he did not know Mrs. Johnson but said he had seen her picture and followed the case closely in the papers. He has made no attempt to communicate with Mrs. Johnson either, he admitted.

"I have always been an admirer of Mrs. Johnson's race although I am from pure Yankee strain myself," he said. "To me Mrs. Johnson is a real woman, a warm, lovable representative of her race and sex and would make a most desirable wife.

"I would not marry any woman I did not love but, as far as Mrs. Johnson is concerned, I do not think that would be very hard for any honest, red blooded man. I know it wouldn't for me."

HOUSE AGREES ON 'LAME DUCKS' LEGISLATION

Washington, March 1 (AP)—The House today adopted the conference report reconciling differences with the Senate on the proposed consitutional amendment to abolish the "lame duck" session of Congress.

Only Senate acceptance of the report is needed to complete Congressional action. This is virtually certain, the Senate having adopted the lame duck amendment seven times in nine years.

President Hoover does not sign the resolution. It goes to the state department to await ratification by 36 states within seven years.

The resolution provides for two indeterminate sessions of Congress to begin on Jan. 3 each year. It was over the second unlimited session that the Senate and House disputed for nearly a decade.

When the House was in Republican control it insisted upon a four months' term for the second session, which Senator Norris (R., Neb.) refused to accept on the ground it would permit the killing of legislation by filibustering. Under Democratic leadership the House approved two indeterminate sessions.

REVOLT CURBED IN FINLAND

Helsingfors, Finland, March 1 (AP)—Withdrawals from banks and considerable difficulty in securing foreign currency were among the most notable results today of the Fascist revolt which led to an encounter with government troops 25 miles from Helsingfors yesterday.

Maneuvers by the government to round up the Fascist leaders failed before dawn today, however, when the latter slipped out of the net which had been laid for them. A company of soldiers surrounded a house at Hameenlinna, where the leaers were known to have been, and the house was searched, but the men were gone.

What New England Leaders Say:

U. S. Senator Marcus A. Coolidge:

It is certainly gratifying to learn that the A & P Stores in Massachusetts are to conduct a sales campaign, urging the use of more New England products. I most heartily endorse this great movement.

If this campaign is a success, as I hope it will be, it will do much to stimulate the buying of products made in New England, and thereby tend to improve general conditions.

Mayor James M. Curley of Boston:

Permit me to congratulate the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company on the campaign to help bring back New England prosperity.

You are right in believing that there is money enough, and business enough in New England to bring prosperity to all our people. Fundamentally there is nothing wrong with New England. What we need is courage of the type which your company is displaying in this effort to persuade our people to buy more New England products. If manufacturers and retailers will join in a movement to sell more of the things which our people produce, I am sure that an increase of business will result throughout New England and will contribute substantially to the return of prosperity for all our people.

I congratulate you upon the effort which you are making, and wish you suceess in it.

Congressman John W. McCormack:

A campaign of this kind should receive the support of all people. Every other section of the country is urging home buying, and conducting campaigns to educate the people of the value and importance of purchasing local products. This is a proper and fitting policy to establish in any section by business interests located therein. It is proper that the same should be inculcated in the minds of the people of New England. In this respect, business should lead the way. Such a campaign receives my unreserved endorsement, and equally, my best wishes for its success.

BUY MORE NEW ENGLAND PRODUCTS

There is money enough and business enough in New England to bring prosperity to every man, woman and child in this section if you and your neighbor will buy the things produced by yourselves and your neighbors. Not one natural asset of New England has been impaired by the business conditions of the past two years. Our lands are still fertile; our power is still abundant; our mills and factories are still numerous and capable of gigantic production. Our people are willing and able to work; capable, honest and thrifty. New England needs only New England dollars in circulation to awaken her many industries, restore prosperity to her farmlands and bring happiness to her citizens. Do your part now. Buy the many things you need. Let your dollars bring greater value to you. Let them provide work for your neighbor and prosperity for all New England.

NEW ENGLAND WEEKS

There's nothing wrong with New England—A & P finds New England's manufacturers and food producers ready and glad to do business. $71,000,000 spent in New England in 1931 is A & P's expression of faith in this section. With the help of our old friends and our rapidly increasing family of new customers, we look forward with great pleasure to spending even more in 1932—to contributing materially to the return of prosperity by increasing the business which we do with and for New England. New England products are equal to the best in the land; New England prices are right. New England business in 1932 is going to be good—and with your help A & P will have a big part in making good business even better.

$71,000,000 spent in 1931 proves that A & P has faith in New England!

$48,000,000 worth of New England products were purchased in 1931 for sale in A & P's 16,000 stores throughout the United States—by far the greatest volume of purchases by any one food organization in this territory.

In addition to A & P's 3,000 New England stores, 13,000 other A & P stores use New England products and by their purchases contribute to New England's prosperity.

11,000 New England men and women are numbered among A & P employees, sharing in the A & P annual payroll, totalling millions of dollars in New England.

New England insurance companies carry millions of dollars of life insurance supplied to all A & P employees by A & P free of charge.

New England's railroads, steamship lines and trucking companies are paid additional millions of dollars for transportation of A & P groceries to warehouses and stores.

3,000 New England property owners collect rents from A & P.

446 banks and trust companies in New England handle A & P funds every year.

A & P holds membership in and contributes to Chambers of Commerce, Boards of Trade and other civic organizations in practically every city and town in New England.

YESTERDAY WAS A TYPICAL DAY IN THE LIFE OF a society editor—can you bear it?

LOUISA VAUGHAN

As always, we awoke to the shrill scream of the telephone bell—we have that kind on purpose. Forgetting to don our slippers in our wild rush to reach it before the fire apparatus arrived, we stepped on a rusty thumb tack which slackened our speed but did not prevent our getting there before it rang for the second time. It was the tabbies' gossip hour and were we little old Henry Wadsworth Longfellow—we were! When they get television it is going to have hanging over the back fence beaten a country mile.

* * *

Come closer—we hear that Samuel Vaughan, a widower who had a deb daughter this year, Louisa, and who has kept the widows and orphans hoping for several years, is giving some merry little week-end parties up at his place at Hallowell, N. H., and the reports are that Sam knows how to treat his guests. Last week the Johnny Simpkins and the Lloyd Nichols were among the lucky numbers and while we never thought they were so very much fun, perhaps they have improved with age. Perhaps Sam supplies the fun—although that also is hard to believe—perhaps the snow provides the fun—perhaps there isn't any fun—perhaps this isn't funny, but WE think it is.

The friendly unmarried is becoming fashionable—that is, those charming people who have BEEN married, divorced and have said "Let Us Be Friends." It is becoming increasingly difficult to accurately know whether couples are decently married, decently divorced and decently platonic. Having just been to the premiere of G. B. Shaw's "Too True to be Good," what the bacillus does it matter. They say—and who are WE to quarrel with the lips that feed us, that Phil Cabot and his former wife, Mrs. Winthrop Ames to you, are Just Friends and that he finds a great deal to consult her about in regard to those long, dull lectures he gives on economics at the Business School. Is it right? Is it wrong? Is it love?

Mrs. Arthur Grannis Off for Bermuda

NOW THAT THE SKATING CARNIVAL HAS GONE down into history, Mrs. Arthur Grannis has taken her daughter, Miss Eleanora, and her summer togs and gone to Bermuda. Shades of last week, how we envy her! They will stop off in New York long enough to collect another daughter, Mrs. Phemester—if you don't know who she is we can't help you out—and then all aboard for sky blue water and coral reefs—or is it reeves.

Artist Entertains

THE ANNOYING LITTLE English custom of teaing in the afternoon led our footsteps to The Galleries where Howard E. Smith, A. T. A. (we hastily assume this means A Notorius Artist), was exposing his equines and incidents. Not knowing the fetlock from the feathers of a horse, we liked his pictures, especially the sunlight on vivid green grass and cool violet shadows cast by fleecy white clouds. Really, you would think you were right out in the country watching a silly old steeplechase.

* * *

At Tea Table

AT THE TEA TABLE WAS Mrs. Gordon Prince and some marvelous pate de foie gras sandwiches. One or the other put us into a most happy frame of mind—we confess, we have never seen more beautiful more deeply beautiful dark eyes such intelligent eyes, than Mrs. Gordon Prince's (Anna Agassiz). We drank ten cups of tea and hundreds of pate sandwiches whilst we talked on the most irrelevant subjects just to look at her. We could even forgive her the faggoting in her satin blouse, she was so absorbing.

Crowds Attend

WE DID GET A MOMENT to say good afternoon to Mrs. Christine Darlington and her charming mother, Mrs. Robert G. Shaw. There were crowds of other people we should have been watching, but we so seldom see an arresting face, we hastened away from Horses Worried by Flies to the crisp coolness of the Public Garden.

* * *

Little French

OUR DAY WAS JUST BEGINNING—we dashed over to the Y. W. for a few minutes of French—(the inveterate optimist still thinks Europe may be possible this summer); whisked away to the Egyptian Room at the Hotel Brunswick for a cozy supper, some of Leo Reisman's dreamy melodies in the half light of the Arab's tent, and a word with Joe Di Pesa, one of Boston's busiest boosters; a glimpse of Lilyan Malmstead, the Scandinavian Venus come to judgment, and off again to the Colonial, where the Irish Devil was packing them in.

* * *

At Premiere

WE WERE SQUEEZED IN between the stage and the first box, where we could hear plenty and see nothing. And we were happy just to be there and listen to our favorite playwright shout his thoughts across the footlights. The play's the thing—in spite of Beatrice Lillie and her adorable mannerisms, Hope Williams and her Beacon Hill accent and Hugh Sinclair and his Greek profile.

* * *

First Nighters

SOCIETY—WE CRINGE AS we say it after seeing this play—came out to greet the dawn of Too True To Be Good and we mean no offense when we mention that Elizabeth Scaife looked swell in a purple crepe with a handsome boy friend. Mrs. George von L. Meyer, Jr., was charming in blue lace with ermine wraps; Mrs. Carl Dreyfus, the beautiful wife of C. D., enjoyed the show from the front row, and a group of post-debs, Barbara Bremer, Susan Brewer and Ada Trafford, came with a trio of boy friends. Leslie Banks, director of the show, was in the lobby receiving the congratulations of his crowd, and we saw Theresa Helburn of Theater Guild fame there also.

The shades of eve are falling fast — came the dawn — Good morning!

Mrs. Cushman to Lecture

Mrs. Robert Cushman speaks before the New England Historic Genealogical Society tomorrow afternoon on "American Furniture in Three Periods." Lantern slides and period costumes will illustrate Mrs. Cushman's lecture.

Those wearing costumes include Mesdames Frederick R. Weed, George Crouse Houser, Chester R. Taylor and Harry Bean Campbell, also the Misses Katherine Chase, Beverly Marshall Jones, Prudence Jones and Faith Barney.

Tea will be served afterwards and those presiding at the tables include Mrs. Walter C. Baylies and Mrs. Samuel Gavitt Babcock, assisted by Mrs. Prentiss Shepherd and Mrs. Clifford Perkins Swaine.

CAPELET IN FRONT OF SPRING STYLES

By DOROTHY ROE

New York, March 1—Miss Spring of 1932 is ready to make her debut. Of course, she will follow the edicts of Dame Fashion, and favor the capelet, which just now is regarded as an essential of the silhouette.

True, the majority of the capelets are removable, or what might be termed as an "after thought" to the jacket suit, the separate coat, the tailored dress of cloth, and even the evening gown and the daytime frock of silk.

These capelets help to interpret the youthful military lines, which also are featured in the new soft frocks, with the tucked and draped sections at the shoulder seamline offering much the same effect.

The colors? Well, it is pretty well agreed that gray flannel with navy blue is just about right, especially if Miss Spring is inclined toward compose costumes. Midnight and medium—perhaps better known as "Patou's blues"—also go well together, and they find a place for both afternoon and evening.

For a change in evening gowns, a "purple" will not be out of place with the arrival of the robins.

My springtime fashion spies, too, report evening trimmings of ribbon and flowers posed at the knee. And even extremely long sashes draped or tied into the decolletage.

RUNS

Why blame stockings when YOU may be at fault?

Are you washing away the ELASTICITY that makes stockings wear?

"ANOTHER PAIR GONE!"—but don't blame the stockings. Do you know YOU may have caused those costly runs?

New stockings give under strain—stretch and spring right back again—because they are elastic.

But if you wash away the elasticity, the lifeless threads, instead of giving, break. The slightest little strain—then a wretched run!

With Lux, you preserve this precious elasticity. That is why this easy way of washing makes even your sheerest, loveliest stockings wear and WEAR.

LUX saves stocking E-L-A-S-T-I-C-I-T-Y

The Lux Way to save the ELASTICITY that makes stockings wear and fit

Wash this 2-minute way:

1. One teaspoon of Lux for each pair.
2. Add lukewarm water to Lux, squeeze suds through stockings, rinse well.

Don't rub with cake soap. It destroys the elasticity. With Lux there is no rubbing.

Avoid ordinary soaps—cakes, powders, chips. These often contain harmful alkali which weakens silk threads, fades colors. Lux has no harmful alkali. Anything safe in water is safe in Lux.

Don't use too-warm water—it fades color. With Lux you use lukewarm water. No hot water needed.

MILLIONS of women keep hands lovely at small cost with Lux in the dishpan.

BOOKS—and a Number of Things

By CHARLES HANSON TOWNE

No essayist and critic is better equipped to write of "Expression in America" than Ludwig Lewisohn. (Harper). Here is a man of German birth, who came in his youth to our country, taught his native language for many years in a mid-West college, and got to know us in some mysterious, occult way. He is bi-lingual, and his English prose flows like a beautiful river. He has been an avid student of literature in all lands; and it is mainly through literature that he discovers us, reveals us to ourselves, and draws conclusions that are at once pertinent and iconoclastic.

His attitude is generous, and at the same time just. He conforms to no standards that have been rigidly laid down. He is, in a word, unafraid. And for this let us thank him on our knees.

He says that Washington Irving was our first real writer, but if the long shadow of the Puritans falls upon us to this day, it touched Irving, the gentleman and scholar, even more. "Creative experience must precede creative speech, and such experience was precisely what the American gentry could not afford."

We were still too close to the Mother Country to create a literature of our own, and, says Mr. Lewisohn, "it is easy to smile at the folk-poems in the early years of the Republic." He alludes, of course, to poems like "The Old Oaken Bucket," "Home, Sweet Home," "Woodman, Spare That Tree," and "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep." "The American clung to the ground and hearth he may have gained and to the sentiments that gathered about it. He had fewer material traditions against which to revolt and became passionately domestic."

Even when one disagrees with Mr. Lewisohn, one finds him interesting. It is odd, for instance, to find him liking Whittier, and thoroughly disapproving of Longfellow. It was Margaret Fuller who asserted that Longfellow's social position and his publisher's sumptuous bindings were factors in his excessive reputation. About Whittier, according to our author, there is something of brooks and trees rather than of horse-hair furniture and antimacassars.

* * *

It is good to find someone coming out bravely in his estimate of Whitman. He leaves no doubt as to his personal view of the meaning of certain lines in the "Calamus" poems.

Of the "polite writers" of the New England school, he has many witty and wise things to say. (Years ago, Gertrude Atherton called them "the Boston bores.") Of Oliver Wendell Holmes he says: "His prose has lightness and brightness but no body. It is ingenious and adroit. There is a high polish, but the polish is on time."

Lowell has said of Thoreau's style: "The language has an antique purity like wine grown colorless with age;" but Lewishohn goes further when he states that "it is the style of a great writer but of a defective man." Of his "Walden," he says: "It is one of the most tonic and heartening books in all literature. I cannot imagine young people reading it and ever thereafter consenting as easily as before to the mean conventions of the world." Which strikes this reader, at least, as the best appraisal of the book ever given in a single sentence.

Of our "sectional" writers, like Bret Harte, Riley, E. P. Roe and a horde of others, Mr. Lewisohn has much to say, such as this of Mary E. Wilkins Freeman: "At present there is over the entire work of such a writer a pallor beside the blaze of the living hour." But it is amazing to find so meticulous a critic alluding to Harris Merton Lyon as "Henry Merton Lyons."

When he comes to such a writer as Thornton Wilder, Mr. Lewisohn says: "The puzzled question asked of fate in that tale is such a question as all men, even the simplest, have asked in their meditative hours. The appeal of the book was a religious appeal. And for that appeal in a nobler and more powerful form mankind is waiting."

And then he proceeds:

"For at the core of modern life there is a fear of life. The old ideologies bore a great part of the burden of man's life for him. He prayed to his gods, fought for his country and begot his posterity within a framework that justified these things. Today he questions even while he still feings to himself to believe. Guilt and fear are at the heart of his fundamental acts and thoughts. His universe has been shattered into a multiverse; nothing binds him to it nor to his fellows. He lives and acts in a bleak void unguided by any principle that makes his actions and thoughts within an intelligible world either coherent or satisfactory. All the old paths are obliterated. In view is a 'waste land.'"

* * *

From all these circumstances the emergence of a neo-idealistic literature may be confidently predicted. So Mr. Lewisohn believes. And from them is also to be derived the almost simultaneous appearance of non-naturalistic or semi-naturalistic art with the work of the critical realists in the America of our time.

Mr. Lewisohn gives high praise to George Sylvester Viereck, hailing him as without doubt the most conspicuous American poet between 1907 and 1914; and he calls him a "liberating influence." There is truth in this statement; and it is curious, in reading his poetry today, to remember that some old fogies were shocked by it once upon a time. There is hope for American expression in the light of such a change in the American mind within less than two decades.

Mr. Lewisohn's book will stimulate every reader of it.

7 FRIENDS AND KIN IDENTIFY WRONG BODY

Although seven relatives and friends identified it as the [illegible] of George A. Crockett, 23, of 8 Maynard ave., Haverhill, the body of the man found frozen in Pine Banks Park, Malden, on Feb. 21, was proved today by fingerprints to be not that of Crockett.

When the body, frozen in ice and snow from the storm of Feb. 4, was found, fingerprints were taken by George MacKinnon of the Malden Public Welfare Department.

These were sent to the New York State Hospital at Napanock, N. Y., where Crockett formerly was a patient. Today the reply and Crockett's actual fingerprints were received and were found not to match.

1ST TELEVISION OF ART TODAY

New York, March 1—Radio's first television art exhibit will go on the air today at 5 p. m., when Malcolm Vaughn, art editor of the New York American and noted art authority, brings contemporary artists to the radio audience via Station WINS and at the same time, reproductions of the canvasses will be shown to the sight audience via Station W2XCR.

The exhibit, which is being held at the Anderson galleries, is for the benefit of the free coffee stations for the unemployed, a division of the free milk fund sponsored by Mrs. William Randolph Hearst.

Among the more important canvasses to be shown before the Jenkins photocells of station W2XCR will be John D. Rockefeller by John Singer Sargent, Judge Cardozo by Augustus Vincent Tack and Mrs. Grace Coolidge by Leon Gordon.

STRIKERS RIOT; FOUR NABBED

Roxbury. They were charged in two counts each with assault and battery.

The elder Hull was treated for mouth wounds and lacerations of the head. Harry Hull sustained minor bruises.

Police charged the attackers wielded an iron bar used for stretching cloth.

WARNED LAST WEEK

Hull told police he was told last week to close his shop or "take his medicine."

Meanwhile, Boston leaders prepared a protest to Police Commissioner Hultman against "brutality" of police.

Little trouble was experienced in the intown strike are atoday.

According to Vice-President Jacob Halpern, of the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union, police, who were ordered to prevent mass picketing and loitering of strike pickets in front of the buildings in the garment centers, employed rough methods.

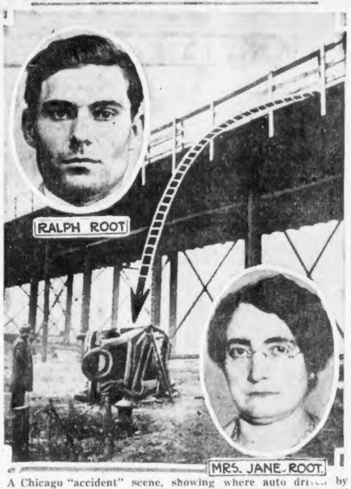
RIGHTS VIOLATED, HE SAYS

Halpern claims that peaceful picketing is permissible under the laws of the State and that strikers entering picket lines have been warned against law violations. The protests will contend that these rights have been denied to the strikers.

Police officials on the other hand contend that numerous complaints have been received from business men in the garment district that the picketing methods are interfering with foot passage along the streets and are hurting business. Capt. Jeremiah Gallivan, of the Lagrange st. station, insisted that arrests have been made only when strikers violated the law or refused to heed the warnings in regard to picketing.

No settlement of differences between the strikers and the manufacturers had been completed as yet according td union leaders, because of the unwillingness of the committee representing the manufacturers to conclude an agreement to be followed by the individual manufacturers. The union committee has therefore decided to attempt to conclude agreements with the individual firms. They have opened headquarters at the Hotel Bradford where they will hold conferences with representatives of the various manufacturers.

SCENE OF DOUBLE TRAGEDY



A Chicago "accident" scene, showing where auto driven by Ralph Root plunged through a railing, killing his wife and daughter. Root leaped from the car in time to save himself. Although thought an accident at the time, statements of relatives of the dead woman seem to point to murder. Root, a known bigamist, who has served a prison term for that offense, is missing. His former wife, Mrs. Jane Root, shown below, told police of Root's attempt to kill her, following the issuance of an insurance policy in his favor. (International photos.)

UNCLE SAM HAS BIG BREWERY

Washington, March 1 (INS)—Uncle Sam owns one of the best breweries in Chicago and intends to hold on to it.

This property came into the government's possession as the result of a foreclosed lien. The property consists of eight acres with valuable buildings on a railroad side track and frontage on one of the principal streets in Chicago.

The brewery cost $475,000, and expensive improvements were placed thereon before the place was possessed by the government following failure of the owner to pay his income taxes. It will be sold when real estate conditions warrant.

Roosevelt Asks Law to Ban Sheriff "Fee"

Albany, N. Y., March 1 (AP)—Gov. Roosevelt today followed up his recent condemnation of the taking of litigants' interest money by ex-Sheriff Farley of New York with a message to the Legislature recommending enactment of a law forbidding the practice.

Although the Democratic governor removed the Tammany Hall sheriff from office on another charge, he devoted a generous portion of his removal order to criticism of this practice of Farley and his predecessors.

Change Is Asked in Air Mail Contracts

Washington, March 1 (AP)—Chairman Mead of the House post office committee, today asked Assistant Postmaster-General Gloved to draw up a bill covering complaints against air mail contract awards.

Mead said the comptroller-general, members of the appropriations committee and of the House joined him in a belief that air mail rates should be reduced further and the whole system placed in "a more healthy condition."

18 Tufts Boys Pay for Prank, Go Free

Eighteen Tufts College freshmen, arrested last fall for destruction of property in Acton in initiation pranks, were freed in Concord court today when Judge Wilson filed the cases.

The youths had made restitution to the amount of several hundred dollars. They are on probation at the college.

LOEB IS NAMED BOYCOTT HEAD

New York, March 1 (AP)—Formation of the American Boycott Association to set up a countrywide, non-governmental boycott against Japan in the hope of effecting arbitration in the Sino-Japanese crisis, was announced today.

Mrs. Corliss Lamont, daughter-in-law of Thomas W. Lamont, one of the J. P. Morgan partners, and William Loeb, Jr., are executive secretaries and the organization has its headquarters in New York.

A statement issued by Mrs. Lamont and Loeb predicted that, should Japan gain control of Manchuria and dominate China, "the Japanese military machine will be so strengthened by the coal, iron, and oil resources taken by Japan in China and Manchuria that it would be next to impossible to check the military group should it again oppose peace and world order."

"Japan," the statement read, "must be taught that the Kellogg pact, the nine-power treaty, and the League of Nations are not mere idealistic expressions of unattainable desires."

Repairs on Akron Rushed by Navy

Lakehurst, N. J., March 1—Air station authorities announced today that the proposed overhauling of the dirigible Los Angeles had been postponed to give priority to the installation of a new fin on the Akron, damaged last week when being taken from the hangar.

Jiggs Diet Was Too Much; Tony Eata da Spaghett'

Trenton, N. J., March 1 (INS)—Jack Spratt could eat no fat and his wife could eat no lean, but their case was not nearly as sad as that of Anthony Aprea, who couldn't eat corned beef and his wife, who hated spaghetti.

Anthony and Agnes Kathleen Donnelly were married on September 27, 1928, and the Italian relatives of Anthony and the Irish relatives of Agnes shook their heads. It was not in the stars that such a union should end happily.

Now Agnes was as great a lover of corned beef and cabbage as Mr. Jiggs, and her table groaned wth the weight of it nearly every night. At first Anthony would smile wanly and make an effort to eat it, but often afterwards he would sneak down to a restaurant to inhale a bowl of zitti, a dish of spaghetti or a portion of antipasto.

About three weeks after the wedding he came in to dinner and there was the inevitable corned beef and cabbage.

"What," he screamed losing his temper for the first time. "Irish turkey again? I'm fed up on this and I'm through."

He angrily threw his clothes into a bag and waltzed out of the door and out of Agnes' life. She has never seen him since and today in Chancery court, Special Master Roy F. Anthony recommended that Agnes be granted a divorce.

SHAW SCORES AGAIN WITH SATIRE IN HIS NEW PLAY

Girl About Town

—By ALYCE SIEMENS—

To One Who Is Amused:

So I amuse you with my silly ways,
Glimpsed by you through an alcoholic haze!
Boy, you're one up if I arouse your glee—
The thought of you is just an itch to me!

—M. C. G.

He Won't Sell!

News of Irving Berlin's dancing with joy over his newest daughter's arrival brings to mind the prize table Cafeman Jimmy Kelly of New York owns . . . It seems when Irving used to hang around that quaint old place in Hester st., known as Kelly's, he had his first inspiration for "Alexander's Ragtime Band" one of the evening, while he was seated in Kelly's . . . Having no paper handy, Irving took a pen-knife and carved the piece out on one of Kelly's old beer tables . . . Years later, when Irving and Ellin Mackey first met, they used to drop in to Kelly's just to whisper romantic sweet nothings to each other, while seated at the famous table—oftentimes stroking it affectionately . . . One day Irving offered Jimmy any sum for it but Kelly wouldn't sell . . . In fact, he had the table removed to the attic, as a prized keepsake of his own! . . . One of Irving's secret desires, we heard recently, is to get that table!

Language a La Roth

We're quite sure Lillion Roth stein), Hub girl appearing at the KO Keith-Boston now, would have ade sure to close the transom to r suite, No. 1236, in the midtown el she's stopping at, if she knew many people could easily hear verbal tirade she fired fast and ariously at the politely listening ellhop who had returned to her suite to explain about her not having the proper endorsement on some check or other, Sunday night . . . 'Twas startlingly frank speaking right up, Lillian, and devotees of yours, who couldn't help but hear it, gasped! . . . And what was that fuss about the gratis song singing at WEEI Saturday evening, and let's see, the kiddos in the top balcony annoyed you too, during your opening performance, didn't they? . . . What's happened to the sweet little Bostonian who used to thrill?

Garrulous Gabbing

Billie O'Connor is an old tabbie! . . . His sister sends him this pillar daily while he's down in ole Virginny—Who said the men didn't like to hash things over? . . . Now if the Boston Childs chain would only adopt the N. Y. idea—with blondes in one store, redheads in another and brunettes only in still another—Harvard's sons would be killed in the rush! . . . Eugene Scanlon still relating how he wouldn't trust his Big Ben to awaken him last Friday at 6 a. m., in order that he could greet George McManus upon his arrival . . . The Watertown phone operator gets the credit! . . . Ada Carroll, who lady-baritones via the air, is Mrs. Leo (Pianoplayer) Cahn's wife . . . Kate Smith—so big—and Helen (Ex-Three's-a-Crowdette) Ault—so tiny—both hail from Washington but never agreed on anything . . . In fact, Big Kate and Tiny Helen once had a battle to be remembered . . . And, Helen brags, "She's the only girl I ever fought with in my life." . . . Have you seen the shiny new "peppered" nickels about town? Look just like the real ones, only sound different when dropped on the floor . . . If you're not sure, just bite one and see the teeth-marks left on the soft substance . . .

Calling Your Attention!

During the Boston-Lucky hour Saturday did you notice the sensational contrapuntal hopping on and off of the "So Tired" melody accomplished by Ted Roy? . . . That, Readers, was something to remember and write home about . . . Ruby Blum, Frances Williams' pianist who is never announced, by the way, drives people to ecstasying over his counterpointing via the piano, but Roy's weaving around and about the melody of tunes is rare talent—to be appreciated by some Big Wig in the near future, we claim! . . . See if we're okay on this . . . So, at last we found out what's been keeping Ted in the cellar practising in the early mornings, and we hope he'll be encouraged for more of it . . . It's terrific!

To Dorchester's Angela Ciccolo: So you enjoyed the G-A-T's air-chatting. Thank you . . . Yes, Cliff and Mickie were there "in the flesh" at the station.

To J. Thornton C.: Your constructive criticism appreciated . . . Shows you spend your two cents our way . . . So Dick Finnegan's wife, nee Mary Carr, and Mrs. D. The Patient	Hope Williams
The Nurse	Beatrice Lillie
The Burglar	Hugh Sinclair
Colonel Tallboys	Ernest Cossart
Private Meek	Leo G. Carroll
Sergeant Fielding	Frank Shannon
The Elder	Pedro De Cordoba

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

The iconoclastic Mr. Shaw once more takes up the business of smashing idols. For that seems to be the pretense, at least, of "Too True to be Good," the new Shavian play which last evening filled the Colonial with Guild subscribers and which, you must frankly concede, found its amusing philosophy falling upon receptive ears. Incidentally, it was a world premiere, bestowed graciously, we are advised, upon America's center of culture.

* * *

Beatrice Lillie

If "Too True to Be Good" appears, at moments, incoherent it may be set down, perhaps, as the author's attempt to sugar-coat his acrid views on civilization and make them as laughable as possible. In effect, it was admirable satire aimed at the conventions of men and the futility of hoping for anything but the worst. There is always a suspicion that when Shaw coaxes an audience to laugh with him, he smiles up his own sleeve at the simplicity of those who purchase his wares. You could not escape that sensation last evening as you were led through a tangled narrative that was almost allegorical in its variations. It was a fantastic story with comic opera settings and the flippant manners of a Ziegfeld revue. Nothing could be more perfect. Only music and lyrics were lacking.

* * *

In his best manner Mr. Shaw preached his familiar sermon; the world was wrong in every detail from domestic relations to the League of Nations. He moved his people from the luxuries of London to tropical sands where the British soldier, with pungent humor, served his king and his country and made philosophic remarks on subjects ranging from biology to Christianity. It was Shaw at his best, pecking away at popular fanaticisms and digging up a laugh at every turn.

* * *

Through many strange adventures his characters moved in good fairy book style. Beatrice Lillie, already famed for exquisite humors, played nurse to a neurotic and then moved to the hot sands of some remote land where the prevailing style for women was boy scout breeches. There was a laugh in every gesture. Hope Williams was the ailing little rich girl, who found ready remedy by taking up with a gentlemanly burglar and joining the expedition south. She too spent a good deal of the evening in B. V. D.'s. It was reserved for Leo G. Carroll to play the most interesting role, that of Private Meek. Like a boy scout, his good deed each day kept everybody in high spirits. That is, everybody but his testy colonel. Mr. Carroll's performance will be happily remembered.

* * *

Mr. Shaw's lecture on the folly of things, as we do them, was further enlivened by Frank Shannon, a sergeant who, for solace, depended upon the Bible and John Bunyon. In the end he discarded both and took to the world. For more emblazoned preachments, Pedro De Cordoba was called to service. A good actor, well chosen.

"Too True to Be Good," in its biting satire, sarcasm if prefer, was Bernard Shaw exactly as you expected to find him. Here you found him gleefully tearing down the temples and setting up new images for worship. For those who can smile at their own sophistries this a royal entertainmnet.

COMING FILM FEATURES WILL BRING REAL REEL STARS

Renate Muller is featured in "Sunshine Sue" at RKO Keith's, Thursday.

Clark Gable, Marion Davies and C. Aubrey Smith are shown in a scene from "Polly of the Circus," which comes to the Loew's State screen next Friday.

"King of Jazz" for Boston

Paul Whiteman, "king of jazz," will bring his famous orchestra and entertainers to the RKO Keith Boston next Saturday. It was Whiteman who lifted "jazz from the gutter, wrapped it in evening clothes, tilted a tall silk hat on its head and slipped an ebony stick in its hand," and this same Whiteman will entertain Boston dancers and amusement lovers.

Whiteman believes that he now has the finest orchestra that he has ever conducted, built around a few remaining members of the original orchestra which he brought from Los Angeles to New York 12 years ago.

Mrs. Diamond Howard Hit

At the Old Howard this week the star is Mrs. Jack "Legs" Diamond, widow of the slain gangster. Mrs. Diamond appears in the sketch entitled "The Woman Afraid," which unfolds a story that keeps the audience at "attention" throughout. She reveals some things that are startling.

The California Beauties burlesque company supplies a fund of merriment. The comedy is well placed in the hands of Harry Levine and Jack "Tiny" Fuller who keep things moving at top speed. "Snookie" Woods, Nanette Dailey, and Ruth Bradley are prominent. John Quigg and Harry Van are oldtime Howard favorites and are received with applause.

Douglas Wright & Company have an amusing vaudeville act entitled, "The Handicap." Ray Conklin & Co. have a hit known as the "Dude Ventriloquist," which is clever. The talking pictures are "The Platinum Blonde" with Loretta Young, Robert Williams and Jean Harlow.

Fete for Nagel

Conrad Nagel

Conrad Nagel, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star who comes to Boston for his first personal appearance, Friday, at Loew's Orpheum, will be the guest of honor on that day at a luncheon at Cocoanut Grove. Manager Victor J. Morris of the Orpheum will be host to a group of fifty newspaper men and women and film and theater executives. Mr. Nagel holds honors as leading man in the films for more than a dozen years, having first established himself on the stage.

Gala Premiere at Keith's

"Sunshine Susie," England's biggest musical film hit which has been a hit in London, Paris and Berlin during the last four months and which has played to greater numbers in those cities than any picture on record, will have its premiere American performance at RKO-Keith's Thursday evening at 9 o'clock. Elaborate plans are being rushed to completion by the theater management so that the opening of this international picture triumph will be a gala affair.

The Constance Bennett film, "Lady With a Past," the current attraction at Keith's, will wind up its two-weeks' engagement at a six o'clock showing on Thursday, after which the theater will be put into gala attire for the elaborate premiere. Kleig lights, moving picture cameras, and musical entertainment by popular artists will usher in the phenomenal musical talking film success.

Royal Pair on Scollay Stage

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

A royal pair hold the deck at the Scollay this week. They're the strangest royal pair, perhaps, this old world can furnish. When we saw them, yesterday afternoon, in a house where finding a seat was a difficult matter because of the crowd, the queen was actually resting her lip on her hand!

That's but one of the many odd things you may see on the Scollay stage. The king and queen, so we are informed, are rulers of 300,000 Ubangis, in the heart of Africa. Up to the vintage of 1921—in that year the government discontinued the practice—all the young women were made "duckbills." Seven of these females, with lips ranging from demi-tasse to big saucer size, are part of a unit with which Manager E. A. Vinson is heading his stage bill. They are introduced by a newsreel "shot" of their home country.

In addition to building up a good setting for the Negroes, Manager Vinson has vaudeville acts of the standard class. Harry Hines is amusing with his monologue. Others are the Hamilton Sisters and Fordyce, singers and dancers; Jack Janis and Co., in a comedy skit, "The Woman Pays," and Stanley Brothers, acrobats.

The New Plays

COLONIAL—Bernard Shaw's "Too True to Be Good," a Theater Guild production; also a world premiere. Reviewed on this page.

HOLLIS—Blanche Yurka in Ibsen's "The Wild Duck." A popular item in Miss Yurka's repertoire. To be reviewed later.

Exeter Theater

Paul Lukas in "Strictly Dishonorable" and George O'Brien in "The Rainbow Trail" are the attractions for today and tomorrow at the Exeter. The last half of the week Una Merkel and William Collier, Jr., will be seen in "The Secret Witness."

Met Offers Features for All

When a combination is formed consisting of a former "legitimate" show manager and a circus press agent, something rather unusual in the line of entertainment and "ballyhoo" is almost certain to result. That is just what has happened at the Metropolitan. Henry Taylor, managing director of the theater, for many years with the Messrs. Shubert and other legitimate theater organizations, and Floyd Bell, for several years press director of Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey, have converted the grand lounge of the popular "Met" into what is truly a "downtown club."

First of all dancing was installed in the grand lounge and this was a tremendous success from the outset. Sid Reinherz popular radio personality, was signed with his Metropolitan Collegians. Afternoons there are ping pong and camelot in the grand lounge. Tea is served from 2 until 5 each afternoon.

Contract bridge is played at dozen tables each afternoon, and just now a contest is being staged in the grand lounge between James F. Manger, bridge expert who expounds the Culbertson system, and Carleton Russell, author of his own work on bridge. In addition there are numerous other features.

George White Is Beauty Judge

George White, producer of "Scandals," which opens a week's engagement at the Boston Opera House on Monday evening, March 7, has acted as a beauty judge for several universities throughout the country since the fall term. These contests are conducted by the editors of college publications who select a group of the leading beauties of the campus and then forward their photographs for final selection by Mr. White.

"One of the remarkable features of acting as judge of the college beauties," asserts Mr. White, "is that for the first time you get to appreciate how many really pretty girls there are in America."

Fatty Arbuckle Plans to Start Comeback Fight Off With Sketch

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service, Inc.
Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service, Inc.

Louella O. Parsons

Los Angeles, March 1—Roscoe Arbuckle will test the public feeling by appearing in a sketch in Pantages Theater in Hollywood next week. If the reaction is what all his friends hope and believe, he will then make a motion picture and take it out in 20 key cities in a personal appearance tour.

Certainly, there is no one cruel enough to put a stone in the way of Mr. Arbuckle's comeback. He has been punished ten-fold. A jury exonerated him, then why should anyone else try to act as his judge?

Certain organizations throughout the country have had their say about keeping him off the screen for many years. If now he can amuse and entertain the American public in the same type of clean comedies he made years ago, why shouldn't he have his chance? Even the most hardened criminal is forgiven and Fatty Arbuckle is no criminal.

Heard and Overheard

The Nicholas Schencks arrive here today. Mrs. Schenck, formerly Pansy Wilcox, is awaiting the second arrival of the stork. Her first child, a daughter, is a little beauty, and the second baby will arrive in the summer. Mrs. Edgar Selwyn, a sister of Mrs. Schenck, is entertaining with a buffet supper in their honor tomorrow night. Joan Bennett has issued invitations for a buffet supper next Saturday night in honor of Mrs. Somerset Maugham. Much interest is expressed in this English woman who firmly believes that every woman should have a career.

New Girl for Warners

Dorothy Sebastian

Charlie Rogers arrived in town last night. One of his first appointments will be with William Boyd, a star on the Pathe program when Charlie was in charge of production. A plan is afoot, I hear, whereby Bill Boyd will be starred in a series of outdoor pictures for the new Rogers independent organization. Meanwhile, the two Boyds, Bill and Dorothy Sebastian, have gone to Agua Caliente for the week-end. A new girl is expected at the Warner Brothers studio shortly. Her name is Helen Vinson and she has been playing in "The Fatal Alibi" in New York. Jack Warner saw her and signed her pronto for "The Jewel Robbery." That's the exciting film that stars Warren William.

Irene's Makeup Wins

I reckon Irene Dunn's makeup in "Cimarron" did it. At any rate, after a month's meditation, Universal decided that Genevieve Tobin is not the type to play the lead in "Back Streets." You see, so much depends on the makeup in the old age sequence. Irene Dunn did the old age parts so beautifully in "Cimarron" she has been borrowed from Radio Pictures.

Snapshots of Hollywood

FAY TEMPLETON with the same infectious smile that captivated her audiences years ago, the center of attraction at CHARLOTTE GREENWOOD'S luncheon. FRANCES STARR on one side of her spoke glowingly of MISS TEMPLETON'S ability as a story teller. MRS. LOUIS B. MAYER in the smartest spring suit of the year, received many compliments. MARIE DWAN some 15 pounds lighter, being asked for recipes on how to get thin. GRACE LA RUE in red, white and blue, in keeping with the table decorations, looked smart. The table, even to the fruit cocktails, carried out the patriotic colors. MRS. REESE, not in motion picture colony, a grande dame of stately appearance, sat at MISS GREENWOOD'S right. AGNES CHRISTINE JOHNSTONF SARAH MASON, EILEEN PERCY and others of the girls who had jobs awaiting them, left early to fulfill engagements. Me too. Hollywood flocking to MRS. SOMERSET MAUGHAM'S exhibit at the Stendahl Galleries. That's all today.

THE GLOBE TROTTER

The horrors of the biggest battle since the World War are vividly pictured in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News Chapei, the native district of the metropolitan city of Shanghai, deluged by bombs from Japanese planes, is shown a dead and deserted city

The North Station, one of the principal targets of the bombers, is a twisted mass of ruins, as are many locomotives and cars. Despite this terrific siege, the Chinese are shown still in possession of the district. Barricades, blasted by bomb and infantry fire, are hastily restored, and the pictures show the beginning of a counter-attack by the Chinese as they advance through the devastated district Anti-aircraft guns blaze away at Japanese scout planes swooping overhead

The scene shifts to the Hongkew district, where a report that the Japanese are coming creates the wildest panic. Thousands rush pellmell toward the International Settlement clamoring for admission.

Waldron's Casino

Waldron's Casino this week has the "Social Maids" burlesquers, which opened to packed houses yesterday. The whole show moves along at top speed.

THE VOICE OF BROADWAY

By LOUIS SOBOL

Down Memory Lane!

(Al Woods concludes his reminiscences.)

Ann Harding was under a five-year contract to me when I came across a play called "The Trial of Mary Dugan." I sent the play to Ann, who was playing stock in Pittsburgh, told her to read it and that we'd start rehearsals in two weeks Ann sent back an indignant reply, said it was a terrible play she would not act in it, she had nothing to do but in the second act and that it was an insult to her intelligence to expect her to play in it. I took her contract to Equity and they wired Ann that she'd have to play it. A few days later her lawyer Arthur Garfield Hays, called on me and pleaded with me not to make her go through with it. "In other words," I told him, "you say to me Ann doesn't like my management. She doesn't think I'm capable of picking the right plays for her. Isn't that it? Well, you tell Ann to see me." I explained to Ann that if she would give me a run of the play contract I'd tear up her five-year contract, and did not want anything to do after the play ran She did, and in the play she didn't like Miss Harding scored her most noted hit.

Pauline Frederick was also under a five-year contract to me at the time she was playing in "Innocent" at the Julian Eltinge Theatre. Her contract read $400 a week for the first two years, $500 a week for the second two years and $600 a week for the last year. One day she met Mr. Zukor, who offered her $1000 a week for a 52-week year in the pictures Miss Frederick and I spoke it over. Pauline said she'd like to take it if I would release her from her contract. "Listen, sweetheart," was my advice, "don't take it. You tell Mr. Zukor you want $2000 a week for the first year, $3000 a week for the second year and $4000 for the third year." "He'll never pay it," Pauline protested. I argued with her. "You have nothing to lose." Zukor agreed to those terms and Pauline asked me what I wanted I asked for but one thing. "After your contract is over give me a chance to put you in a play on the same terms of our former contract" Twelve years later Pauline came into my office. "Al," she said. "I'm ready for a play on the same terms." I wouldn't do that, but gave her a contract for $1000 a week and 50 per cent of the profits, and that year we made $200,000

Claudette Colbert walked into the office one day and asked for a job. I had her read a part, signed her up for five years and sent her to Chicago with Lowell Sherman, who later told me that Claudette was one of the best actresses he ever worked with. About a year later I had a play, "The Kiss in a Taxi," which Leonora Ulrich refused to play in. So having Claudette under contract, I put her in it and the sensations she created both in that play and "The Barker" clinched her for the pictures and graduated her from $100 a week to the present $3700 she is getting with Paramount

While "Fascinating Widow" was playing in Providence with Julian Eltinge I saw Lowell Sherman in stock there. I signed him for five years and brought him to New York. One day he came to me and said, "Al, I've got to have $1500 right away." I let him have it and about a month later Sammy Shipman showed me a play of his called "Lawful Larceny." I wanted Sherman to play the part, but he protested, claming that it was such a small part and that he wouldn't go over in it. I told him that he'd be the hit of the show and I'd pay him $500, plus the $1500 he owed me, to play the part the first week of the show If after that he didn't want to continue he could quit after the first week. In the reviews the morning after the premiere the critics said he was the hit of the show.

I saw Katharine Cornell in "The Bill of Divorcement" and wanted to sign her up for five years. She wouldn't tie up with anybody, but she said if I had a play she would love to work for me Some time later I picked up "The Green Hat," sent it to Katharine and told her the names of two other actresses that wanted to play it. She read it and liked it, but thought the other two could do it better than she could and wanted to give it up. I disagreed with her, told her that she certainly could play it better than anyone else, and she finally consented. It was the first play she ever starred in, although there was nothing in her contract stipulating a star billing. Katharine is the only actress I ever met who refused to have her name in lights before she felt it was right to be starred I will say that without Katharine "The Green Hat" would have failed, and I sent a picture to her with the inscription: "To the girl who made 'The Green Hat' a success." In my opinion, I think Katharine Cornell is the greatest artist on the American stage today.

One of the biggest joys I ever had was a play called "Jealousy" that opened and closed three times I practically forced Fay Bainter to play the part after that and while it was a play with two people and but one set of scenery, I never figured out why it made such a success at the Maxine Elliott Theater. I cannot understand today why Fay doesn't get into pictures, since she would be a find, and is one of the most intelligent actresses on the stage.

"Shanghai Gesture" always brings to mind the trouble Florence Reed and I had. We hadn't been speaking to each other for seven years when I started to cast the play. Leslie Carter was in her part originally, but we had so much trouble with Leslie regarding direction that, after a day in Atlantic City, we closed the play. I wanted to get Flo-Flo, but she was in St. Louis playing vaudeville. I called her on the phone. "This is Al Woods." "Just a minute, Al," Flo-Flo said, "I have a letter here and I want to read it to you. A friend of mine sent it to me, and he says that he just saw a play in Atlantic City. It was made for me, and to get in touch with you immediately. Is that what you wanted to talk to me about?" After seven years of not speaking we both agreed that it was a most remarkable coincidence. Flo-Flo was on her way to New York, but first had to play two weeks of vaudeville here. She took that part, rehearsed it while playing, and in two weeks knew it word for word.

During the time the Shubert and the Klaw & Erlanger factions were fighting, each group signing up as many good producers as they could get, I had signed with Klaw & Erlanger, but never got a New York booking from them. Klaw & Erlanger had five theaters against the twenty the Shuberts owned and they had them filled with productitons by Sam Harris, George M. Cohan, Charles Dillingham and George Tyler. Having about four or five shows on the road and disgusted with not being able to place even one of them in New York, I decided to go with the Shuberts. I called Erlanger and his office told me he was ill at home. I made an appointment to go to his home at 8 that night and on my way up decided to bring him some cough drops. As soon as I entered his room he growled: "What do you want?" I told him to take some cough drops, because when he had heard me he would yell his head off, since in those days the word Shubert to Erlanger was like a red flag waved in the face of a bull I told him why I had decided to go with the Shuberts, and after he calmed down he said he was glad I had told him about it first instead of having to read it in the newspapers

Shubert gave me a contract for 10 per cent more than I'd been getting with Erlanger. The first year of my contract I had about six shows on the road and the terms of the contract read so that I was making money and the Shuberts were losing it. I came back to town and asked Lee to have lunch with me. "I'm too busy, Al," he complained "I must see you, Lee, it's important." We went into Rector's and when I handed him the menu he waved it away. "I don't want anything. What's on your mind?" "I don't like the terms of my contract, Lee." "Let me tell you something," he protested, "I'd never let you have those terms if you didn't have a five-year contract." "But I don't want those terms, Lee. I want you to cut them 5 per cent." "That's wonderful, Al," he shouted, "I certainly appreciate that." I gave him the menu once more. "What'll you have, Lee?" And darned if he didn't order about $8 worth of food.

HYMNS OF 'BLOOD' TO GO

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

Methodists Find Them 'Revolting'

New York, March 1 (AP)—Certain hymns containing the "imagery of blood" are likely to be dropped from the hymnal of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church South

Rev. Dr. John W. Langdale, secretary of the commission on the revision of the hymnal and psalter of the two churches, told a gathering of ministers such imagery had become revolting to young people.

One hymn suggested for elimination is "The Gospel," written in the 18th century by Isaac Watts and containing the stanza

> To the blest fountain of thy blood,
> Incarnate God, I fly
> Here let me wash my spotted soul
> From crimes of deepest dye."

Although final action has not been taken on any hymns, 44 out of 121 hymns in the present book written by the prolific Charles Wesley are tentatively listed for elimination, and six of 19 hymns in the book written by John Wesley, father of Methodism, have been set aside for probable omission

Here [illegible] Garner leaders:

Henry H. McPike of San Francisco, former chairman of the Democratic state central committee.

Miss Virginia M. Spinks of Palo Alto, first president of the Woman's State Democratic Club, a member for years of the Democratic state executive committee, Democratic presidential elector and honorary president of the women's state Democratic forces.

QUITS ROOSEVELT

Henry A. Monroe, past president of the Bar Association of San Francisco and president of the Democratic Club of California.

William P. Hubbard, a leading attorney of San Francisco, manager of the national campaign in California for former United States Senator James A. Reed.

William C. Mahoney, secretary of the Democratic Club of California.

In [illegible] Democratic method in [illegible] delegates for the Roosevelt [illegible] in California, Miss Spinks has resigned as president of the Woman's Roosevelt for President Club of northern California and declared for Garner.

In Phoenix, Ariz., John J. Irvin, a Democratic leader, stood on record with an unqualified indorsement of Speaker Garner for president.

"From the number of excellent men mentioned as possible standard-bearers," said Mr. Irvin, "Garner of Texas, in my opinion, would come nearer to bringing east and the south and the west, all sections of the country and all factions of the party together."

John [illegible] of Los Angeles, a veteran Democratic leader, gave his indorsement to the Garner movement.

OTHERS FOR GARNER

[illegible]

Col. W[illegible] of American [illegible] well known [illegible] of Los Angeles, formerly of San Diego, joined the array of Garner enthusiasts.

Mrs. Grace L. C[illegible] of Sierra Madre enlisted in the movement and informed Garner for President club headquarters here that she would organize a Garner club in Sierra Madre.

Walter M. Pierce, ex-Governor of Oregon and National Committeeman-elect, today recognized Garner's availability.

GARNER BOOM IN CONGRESS

By FRASER EDWARDS

Universal Service Correspondent

Washington, March 1.—Congress furnished two [illegible] developments today in the [illegible] involving Speaker John N. Garner.

One was an open [illegible] of Garner as the Democratic nominee for President by Representative John McDuffie of Alabama, Democratic whip.

The other was [illegible] in the Senate by Senator [illegible] Connally of Texas.

McDuffie issued a statement with a preface that it was done without the knowledge or consent of Speaker Garner, in which he demanded the drafting of the Texan as the Democratic nominee for President.

Connally took up the cudgels for Garner by [illegible] Senator Moses of New Hampshire [illegible] spokesman [illegible] conspiracy to [illegible] prominent Democrat [illegible] the party's nominee for President.

McDuffie praised Garner for his leadership in the [illegible] of economic relief legislation and his refusal to give any encouragement to the movement to [illegible] for the Democratic presidential nomination, and added:

"His national legislative experience of thirty years, with his superior knowledge of government, his rugged, decisive character, his fine courage and his proven practical ability epitomize that type of leadership which the American people are seeking in these times of unprecedented economic distress.

"In every section of the country he is commended for his leadership and patriotic cooperation in the passage of emergency measures designed for relief, and his disposition not to play politics with his high office.

"From coast to coast and from the Canadian border to the Gulf of Mexico, there is a growing demand for his nomination which has assumed the proportions of a movement to draft this great [illegible] for President."

Speaker Battled Rules Set Up by Reed and Perfected by Cannon and Emerged as an Astute Parliamentary Leader

CHAPTER IX.

JOHN N. GARNER, in his early days in the House of Representatives, felt crushed and smothered. And no wonder!

The most ruthless political oligarchy that had ever appeared in America ruled with an iron fist. At the head of this organized despotism stood Joseph G. Cannon of Illinois, the Speaker. The rules by which he governed like a czar had been perfected by Thomas B. Reed. The machine which he dominated was small. It was the perfect close corporation.

The heart of his machine was the committee on rules, of which the Speaker himself was the chairman and whose members he appointed.

In fact, the Speaker named all the committees and appointed their chairman, and moreover, he had the power of "recognition" in a way that enabled him to dominate the House by ignoring in a negative way, those who were outside the pale.

There were rumblings against this autocracy in the 58th Congress, but they were faint. Storm clouds grew darker in the 59th Congress, where men like Garner, of Texas, of the minority party, had little or no voice in the making of important laws. The Speaker and a handful of Republican leaders determined what bills should not be passed. From this political tyranny there could be no redress save through force.

It was natural the Democrats, Garner among them, were sullen and resentful. On the Republican side an insurgent movement began, at first so puny that it was laughed at by the bosses.

President Taft called the 61st Congress in extraordinary session, and it met on March 15, 1909, for the purpose of enacting a new tariff law. Mr. Taft, singularly lacking in clairvoyance, did not perceive that this law, plus insurgency, were to spell his political doom.

CHAMP CLARK FIGHTS

There was one man on the Democratic side of that House who was an orator, a statesman, a parliamentarian of exceptional skill and learning, and a grim fighter.

This was the Democratic leader, Champ Clark of Missouri. The lieutenants trained in democratic government by him are today the leading spirits of the House of Representatives under a new and wholesome regime.

On the opening day of the extra session, Champ Clark arose in his place and offered an amendment to the rules, removing the Speaker from the chairmanship of the Rules Committee, and transferring from the Speaker to the House itself the power to appoint this committee. It also increased the membership of the committee from five to fifteen members. It was the first attempt to break down "Cannonism." From the point of view of the ruling obligarchy, it was as deadly as dynamite.

John N. Garner, a devoted follower of Champ Clark, voted with his leader. The motion was lost, the supporters mustering but 180 votes against the 203 commanded by the oligarchy. Of the 180, only 166 were of Champ Clark's own party. Fourteen insurgents boldly braved "Uncle Joe" Cannon to his face, and suffered for it, by loss of place and influence in the House.

In the midst of the debate Mr. Garner, of Texas, arose, and asked a pertinent question.

GREAT BATTLE

In reply Champ Clark said that the liberals of the House had entered upon a great battle.

"We had to fight the power of the machine in this House," said he, "and nobody appreciates the power of the machine more than I do. We had to fight the influence of the President of the United States, new in office, with the pap undistributed, and lots of hungry people. In addition to that the entire force of the Cabinet was enlisted against us. In addition to that the 'regular' Senators were enlisted against us, and whether they have drafted the Supreme Court or not I do not know."

A few Democrats did not stand with Clark in this first fight for the enfranchisement of the House of Representatives, but Garner stood with Clark, then and thereafter.

On July 31, 1909, the House finally voted to agree to the conference report on the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill, which passed, on this, the final and decisive ballot, by the narrow margin of 195 to 183. Here again John N. Garner followed his great leader, Champ Clark, and voted against the bill, which finally became law, by the President's signature, August 5. It was William Howard Taft's political death warrant. But it was a good omen for Garner.

In the following session of the same Congress, Garner took part in the most momentous political revolution in the history of the United States in which he fought shoulder to shoulder with the leader of his party.

The second revolt against "Cannonism" occurred on March 16, 1910. A parliamentary reform known as "Calender Wednesday" had previously been adopted, to permit members to obtain action on bills which the oligarchy had hitherto smothered in committee. On this historic date Speaker Cannon sought to override this "Calendar Wednesday"; there was appeal from the decision of the chair and Cannon was over-ruled.

At his side on the upward march, Mrs. John Nance Garner has been the constant aid of the Texan representative from the time he began the public career which has brought him to the fore as a presidential possibility.

FOLLOW UP ADVANTAGE

The following day this advantage was followed up by George W. Norris, now the Progressive Senator from Nebraska, who offered a resolution proposing to abolish the committee on rules of five members, and substitute an elective committee of 10 which should select its own chairman and of which the Speaker should not be a member. It was practically identical with Champ Clark's proposal which had been made a year before.

Garner threw himself into this fight on the side of Champ Clark. The battle was the most memorable in the annals of Congress. Cannonism was dethroned, and for the first time since the establishment of the government, by this and subsequent reforms, the Speaker was stripped of his arbitrary powers, was removed from the rules committee, was deprived of the right to name the committee, and the ruling power in the House was restored to the membership of the House, where it still reposes.

Although this is commonly referred to as an insurgent victory, the groundwork for the revolutionary reform was laid by Champ Clark of Missouri, and was made possible only in consequence of the loyal support of Democrats like John N. Garner, and progressive Republicans of the stamp of Norris of Nebraska. They fought shoulder to shoulder, but without the whole body of Democratic votes the handful of insurgent Republicans would have been powerless.

PROGRESSIVE INFLUENCE

It was inevitable that a man of John N. Garner's natural aptitude for parliamentary strife, and of his inate sense of justice and fairness, should have been profoundly influenced by this progressive movement in the House of Representatives.

It did influence him in many ways. He became, for one thing, a student of and a recognized authority on the rules of the House. It was, and is, necessary for a member to know these rules in order to obtain his rights as the representative of a constituency, and secondly, to become a force in the House. Garner, from the outset nursed the ambition to become a power in the body of which he was a member.

Fighting such a brave fight under such an inspiring leader as Champ Clark, the Texan became impregnated with the spirit of liberalism. And at the same time he gained an intimate knowledge of the machinery by which so vast a body as the House of Representatives is necessarily governed.

Garner emerged from this contest, which extended over a considerable period before all the reforms were finally accomplished, one of the most astute parliamentary leaders in the House, master of the rules and precedents which are bewildering in their immense volume, having come down as they have, from the first Congress in 1789.

Although the Republican party lost the House in the following election, President Taft called the 62d Congress in extra session on April 4, 1911, to [illegible] Canadian reciprocity, and Garner had the great satisfaction of helping with his vote to elevate Champ Clark to the Speakership.

Ten days later he voted with Clark in favor of the law providing publicity for campaign expenditures.

Garner followed the leadership of Clark so closely that he also voted for the reciprocity bill, although originally his district had been against the principle of reciprocity. Speaker Clark himself on this rollcall took the floor and asked that his name be called that he might vote for it himself, an unusual thing for a Speaker to do except to break a tie.

By this time John N. Garner was recognized as one of the outstanding younger leaders on the Democratic side of the House.

His spurs had been won.

It would not be long before [illegible] received them.

ARTISTRY OF HOUSEWIFE LOSING FOLLOWERS TO SCIENCE OF CANNING

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

VARIOUS MEMBERS of the younger critical brotherhood h e been taking polite cracks at Max Eastman's new book on poetry (The Literary Mind: Scribners). His contention, as I understand it, is that poetry is dying out, being destroyed by science. The younger set are uttering heated caveats in behalf of E. E. Cummings and the Benet brothers and Edna Millay and T. S. Eliot, on the ground that there are at present as good fish in the poetic sea as ever came out of it.

PROF. ROGERS

Mebbe so! But a stray sentence on the radio this evening sent my thoughts tumbling in a different direction, or rather to a different angle of the subject. The result is that I am beginning to suspect that Max Eastman is right. Not as regards poetry alone, but as regards creative art of all sorts.

• • •

Science Attacking Culinary Art

This was a manicured and marcelled female voice over the radio, with polished consonants and meticulous vowels—the kind of enunciation that you just know is utterly synthetic and makes you want to throw things. It cheered up the poor overworked American housewife who is so busy that she simply will not take the time any longer, or wear herself out, making the elaborate desserts that her men folks love. So naturally she turns to Syntho Puddo, the exquisite ready-made confection that makes marvelous puddings and pies, will do at a pinch for breakfast cereal, and can be used for wallpaper paste or to clean your car.

There, if you like, is where science is doing its best to destroy poetry and creative art. For that instinct for sublimating the everyday world does not express itself merely in sonnets or painted landscapes or chunks of clay. That is the highbrow and more or less useless form of such expression. Shaw says somewhere that all art is merely an expression of the frustrated Life Force. Folks who want to create and can't, turn to art, a poor imitation of an imitation. Women who can create babies don't bother to paint pictures. Men who can create businesses don't bother to paint landscapes. There's something in it, I reckon.

The psychology of that broadcast is all wrong. The short and easy scientific way of doing things has limited women, not freed them. One has only to look at the women's pages in the newspapers to realize that there are hundreds of thousands of women still keenly interested in artistic creation. They are proud to write out their favorite recipes and to exchange them for others that will try their technical and manipulative skill to the utmost. A new pudding, a complicated pie, a beef stew with tricky garnishing, a brand new quilt pattern or crochet formula—these are their arts and they are proud of them.

Art in Lemon Meringue Pie

Was there ever a statuette which was more delicate and [illegible]ty in its making, or more dedicated to the idea of beauty, than an absolutely perfect lemon meringue pie? Is not a great platter of cold meats and colored vegetables as creative in design and color as a landscape? A planked steak and fixings is as elaborate and aesthetic a performance as a textile design. And a new dress, dyed and made over out of an old one, may be as successful and triumphant a piece of imaginative creation and manipulative technic as the freest piece of free verse you ever saw.

Our American women have always recognized that fact. The pride of the woman who is not afraid to match her chocolate cake or deep-dish pie against all competitors at the church sociable is essentially the pride of the artist. If there is one woman in the village to whom one turns instinctively for a drawn-work doily or a log cabin quilt, that woman is the undisputed Matisse or Edna Millay of that village. And the doily or the quilt gives [illegible] as much aesthetic pleasure, properly considered, as the funny painting or the fancy sonnet. It is quite as lasting—and a lot more useful.

But the women to whom the advertisements appeal are losing all their opportunities for being artists. The lure of ignoble ease has [illegible] them. What chance of artistic expression is left, if you buy your food already cooked or canned, all your desserts machine made? How develop yourself as an artist if every dress and hat you wear is ready-made, if you never dye and make over, if you never have the fierce thrill of creating—that is the word'—something good looking out of comparatively nothing? The answer is no chance, no development. Instead you go to meetings about the League of Nations, or play bridge, or take a course in handicraft jewelry, and make bad bracelets instead of good pie or little slams instead of superlative embroidery.

Lincoln Glorified a Mince Pie

That is perhaps why there have been so few first class women artists in music, in the arts, in poetry and drama. Not that woman lacks genius but that her genius has been poured into these other narrow but profoundly deep creative channels.

When Lincoln was running for the presidency, he stopped at the house of a woman he had known when he was a youngster. The proud woman had prepared for him a grand dinner, turkey, oysters and fixings, but he asked her for one of her mince pies and he ate that mince pie and that only. That woman was just as proud as Cellini was when the Duke praised his Perseus and for exactly the same reason. That pie-making artist has her little niche in history.

There is an art in raising small children, which young college bred mothers who turn them over to high school girls while they go to a lecture on the new psychology of child-raising will never know. Corned beef and cabbage properly cooked is a work of art. But a good game of contract merely proves the determinist's contention that we are all automatons in whom free will does not exist.

The woman who decides whether a pie should have a whole top or criss-cross strips is solving an artistic problem. The woman who dares to blend baby blue and vermilion on the trimming of a basque is an artist—a modern artist, of course—in her heart of hearts. The woman who chooses her own paper and does her own wall-papering knows joys not unlike those of Michelangelo in the Sistine Chapel. She may be uninformed on the proposed boycott of Japan.

Cheer up, Mr. Eastman. So long as the women's pages last, and all the solicitous advertisers, millions of our women will be sublimating their house-keeping into art. "Who sweeps a room as for Thy laws, makes that and the action fine." These are the real artists. The rest do not matter——much.

M'KNIGHT AIDED BANK WITH 'FEES'

OTHER WORLDS LIKE OURS, SHE SAYS

Miss Cannon, Harvard Savant, Believes Other Planets Are Peopled

"There is no reason whatever for a belief that there are no other planetary systems like ours in the rest of the universe.

"Probably there are thousands, even millions, of suns about which planets revolve, and among this number there must be many planets very similar to the earth in size and distance from their sources of heat. It follows then that life similar to that on earth would exist at all parts of the universe."

The author of these statements is Miss Annie Jump Cannon of Harvard Observatory, the greatest living authority on the nature of the stars. She has studied and catalogued 2[illegible],000 individual stars [illegible] all the closest neighbors of our solar system.

"Among those stars," she said today, "I have found about 60,000 very similar to the sun, in point of luminosity, temperature, chemical makeup and so forth.

"The stars I have studied are merely those of the immediate celestial neighborhood. In the billions of other stars making up our galaxy and the many other billions contained in the other hundreds of known galaxies, this same ratio of stars similar to our sun must hold true.

"Thus there literally must be billions of stars similar to our own sun. Mere chance alone would indicate that these would have planetary systems, brought into being by accidental collisions.

"But I do not believe things happen by accident in the universe. Our planetary system exists because of some fundamental universal circumstance. Thus other systems must exist."

LEADERS IN LABOR FIGHT

CHARLES W. AMES — TONY A. GAROFANO

Two of the leaders in the fight for the unions in the "yellow dog contract" fight before the Senate are Representatives Charles W. Ames and Tony A. Garofano of Lynn. More than 100 Lynn shoe cutters invaded the State House yesterday to see the fight, but action on the bill went over until today. (Staff photo.)

FIREBUG ROUTS 24 FAMILIES

Twenty-four families, including several small children, were driven to the street by fire, said to have been incendiary, which swept the top floor of a three-story apartment building at 1 Brightwood ter., Lynn, early today.

Sergt. Francis E. Lawler of the Lynn police saw smoke coming from the third floor of the building. He sounded the alarm and then rushed into the building, arousing the occupants and assisting them to safety.

Fire and police officials estimated the damage at $[illegible]. They said they would seek a probe by the state fire marshal's office today.

JEWS TO HONOR MRS. SAYRE

A dinner in honor of Mrs. Jessie Woodrow Sayre, daughter of President Wilson, will be given by the Woodrow Wilson Society, composed of leading Jewish members of the Democratic party in this State, in the Hotel Lenox tonight.

Among the speakers will be Frank J. Donohue, chairman of the Democratic State Committee, David Goldstein, Leopold Goulston, Samuel G. Thorner, Abraham C. Webber and Benjamin Dellheim.

Many prominent Democrats from all over the State are expected to attend.

Revere Cops Mobbed in Raid

Two members of the Revere police liquor and vice squad were mobbed, robbed and beaten in the Revere Community Club early today.

Lieut. Carroll Davis was attacked without warning when, at 2 o'clock, he entered the club where a noisy stag party was applauding the efforts of a girl dancer. His gun was taken and he was kicked and beaten and thrown into an alley unconscious.

Police said the two officers went into the club because of one police and were attacked as soon as they entered the door.

The Revere police books report that a man named [illegible] had shouted for someone to get Sullivan again when [illegible] was done.

Special Officer Daniel Sullivan, who was with him, drew his gun and was struck from behind [illegible] mobbed. His gun was stolen.

Davis has concussion of the brain, bruises all over his body and a severe injury in [illegible] the exact nature of which will not be determined until X-rays are taken.

He was rushed to Whidden Memorial Hospital, Everett, where it was later reported his condition was not serious. Apparently from the nature of his injuries, after being knocked down he was given the boot—brutally kicked in the face and body.

Sullivan was sent [illegible] to the police station.

Senator Parkman to Speak

Senator Henry Parkman of Boston will speak at a Washington birthday observance to be held on Friday evening in [illegible] Gore Hall, Waltham, by [illegible] Gore Lodge, I. O. O. F.

8 INJURED IN A BUS CRASH

Eight persons, seven of them residents of Boston, were injured today and 11 others severely shaken up when an automobile and an Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway bus crashed at Brockton ave. and Bedford st., Abington.

The most seriously injured was George E. Bowers, 504 East Seventh st., who is at Brockton Hospital with a possible fracture and severe bruises on head and body. His name is on the danger list.

The other injured occupants of the car were Robert J. Ambrose, [illegible] Howe [illegible], South Boston; his daughter, Mary, 12; Catherine C[illegible], [illegible] Dennis, Kathleen C[illegible] [illegible] George He[illegible] of South Boston. U. S. JURY MAY PROBE BANK

A federal grand jury probe of the closed Boston Continental National Bank was seen today when a number of witnesses before the grand jury were recognized as officials and employes of the bank.

The group were in conference for some time with Asst. U. S. Atty. John J. Walsh before they were called to the jury room.

The bank was closed several months ago by federal bank examiners and later faced a petition for receivership.

USED THEM TO PAY LOSS ON MORTGAGE

Defense Bares Point as Witnesses Are Quizzed at Medford Trust Company Trial

Fees received by President Edwin T. McKnight of the closed Medford Trust Co. for selling certificates of deposit were used to make up a loss suffered by the bank on a mortgage, the defense brought out today at trial of McKnight and Frank W. Lovering, a director, in Middlesex Superior Court.

McKnight collected the fees from Treasurer Edwin E. Blakely and turned them over to Lovering who in turn transferred them to the savings department to liquidate the mortgage loss.

Lovering took the witness stand in McKnight's behalf and told the story after it had been drawn in part in cross-examination of Blakely.

PAID UP MORTGAGE.

Why it was necessary to liquidate the mortgage loss in this way was not brought out. Lovering testified that McKnight suggested it.

Lovering also testified that he and his father, Lewis H. Lovering, made donations of other money for the same purpose.

The mortgage in question was for $12,500 and was on a vacant lot owned by Daniel J. Cerucci.

Ex-Treasurer Charles L. Barnes testified for the defense that the directors voted to pay commission to officials and employes selling certificates of indebtedness, but he admitted when shown the records that no entry recording this vote was ever made.

Lovering, while on trial with McKnight, is not involved in the charge now being tried—a charge against McKnight of accepting fees illegally. Barnes and Blakely are under indictment on other charges, but are not on trial at this time.

McKNIGHT TO TESTIFY

When it came time for the defense to have its inning on the chrage of accepting fees illegally, McKnight was among those sworn as a witness and he will testify in his own behalf.

Another high spot in today's testimony was testimony of Treasurer Blakely, under cross-examaniation, that the state bank examiners never criticized the payment of the fees, which the government now alleges McKnight illegally received.

Announcement that officials and employes would be paid fees for selling certificates of deposit was made at a banquet of the Employes' Association at Farber Inn, according to testimony of Philip Ferguson, a teller, called by the government.

Lovering was asked by Asst. Dist. Atty. William G. Andrew if he received from McKnight all the fees that the latter collected from the treasurer.

"I can't say as to that," was the reply.

Q.—You received some of the commission money from McKnight? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where? A.—At the bank.

McKNIGHT CUT PAY

Q.—The money you received from McKnight was in cash? A.—Yes.

Q.—How much did you receive all told? A.—$2182.25.

Q.—Did McKnight receive any other fees that he did not turn over to you? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Was it once suggested that the Cerucci mortgage be charged off as a loss by the bank? A.—Yes.

Q.—Who suggested liquidation of that mortgage by outside donations and by the fees paid to McKnight? A.—Mr. McKnight.

It was revealed that David R. [illegible], who is also under indictment but not on trial, will be a government witness later.

Colt's Quiz Frightens the Maid Eunice

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

At 11:30 on New Year's Eve, Police Commissioner Thatcher Colt arrives at the exclusive Mayfair Club in response to a mysterious summons from District Attorney Merle Dougherty. The latter informs Colt that Lola Carewe, known as "The Night Club Lady," widow of Gaylord Carewe, the cotton planter, is the "higher-up" responsible for numerous jewel robberies perpetrated recently, which baffle the police. Lola tells Colt her life is threatened. He takes up the case and surrounds her apartment with a police guard; but in spite of this Lola is found stricken on the floor of one of the rooms. Colt suspects poison in her death, which follows.

Into Walker's hands the commissioner intrusted the wooden box with its cotton lining and splintered sliding lid, found in the snow.

"Walker," explained Thatcher Colt, "this box is used to contain certain kinds of medical laboratory specimens. Cover the supply houses. See what you can get. Report to me personally on this."

"Okay, chief!" grinned Walker and hurried off. It was the middle of the night, but Walker would not wait; soon he would be routing laboratory supply dealers out of their warm sheets and firing questions at them.

Meanwhile Thatcher Colt, after a [illegible] conference with Flynn, called aside Dr. Multooler. The assistant medical examiner, famous for his clever deductions in many murder cases, was tall, ruddy-faced, with the pink bulb nose and small twinkling eyes of a stage comedian. Multooler had the soul of a poet, condemned to a life-long daily diet of post mortems. The autopsist was here now for only a regulation preliminary examination. As soon as Thatcher Colt gave the word, Multooler would order the body of Lola Carewe sent to the morgue at Bellevue and there fall to work upon it in [illegible] quest for facts.

EXPLAINS TO DOCTOR.

To Dr. Multooler Colt briefly explained the situation, adding:

"Now, doctor, I do not expect you to perform an autopsy in this pent house. But I would like to have you make as complete an examination as possible at once. If you can get hold of anything that will throw some light on this problem, I shall be grateful to you. And, doctor—can you have the autopsy performed immediately afterward?"

MISSING BROKER FACING ARREST ON THREE LARCENY CHARGES

Accused in Medford Bank Case Confer With Counsel as Fight Opens

ATTY. McCALLUM — EDWARD T. McKNIGHT — ATTY. KELLEY — FRANK LOVERING — ATTY LUCY

Edward T. McKnight, president of the closed Medford Trust Co., during a lull in his trial in Middlesex Superior Court, conferred with Attys. William P. McCallum and William P. Kelley on the progress of the case, while his co-defendant, Frank W. Lovering, a director of the bank, discussed aspects of the trial with Atty. George H. Lucey. Edwin E. Blakeley, treasurer of the bank, testified that McKnight, along with other directors and employes of the bank, accepted commissions on the sale of certificates of deposit in the Medford bank. WARRANTS ARE ISSUED FOR KINSMAN

Police Say Other Complaints Are Piling Up Against the State St. Security Dealer

A warrant charging three counts of larceny against George P. Kinsman of Lynn, missing State st. broker, was obtained in municipal court today by Police Inspector George Farrell of the bank squad.

Kinsman, treasurer of the European Securities Corporation, dealers in foreign stocks and bonds on a margin basis was reported missing and the firm's books were reported missing yesterday.

WARRANTS OBTAINED

The date of the disappearance was given by two members of the company, Gilbert Trunkett of Waban and Lawrence Skou of the Back Bay, as last Thursday. They also locked up the office yesterday when they reported the treasurer missing.

Inspector Farrell went into municipal court today with Marcus A Brener, an attorney and the complainant, and obtained the warrant charging larceny specifically of $709 50, but the police inspector told Judge Charles Carr that a number of other compaints had been received both at police headquarters and at the securities division of the Public Utilities Department.

Brener, in his complaint, charged that he bought 25 shares of Electric Bond & Share, valued at $265 63, and personally paid Kinsman for the shares

CHECK WORTHLESS.

Since then, although Brener has demanded either the money or the shares he said, he has received neither

The complaint also charges that a check given by Kinsman to Brener for $443 87 was returned with the notation, "insufficient funds"

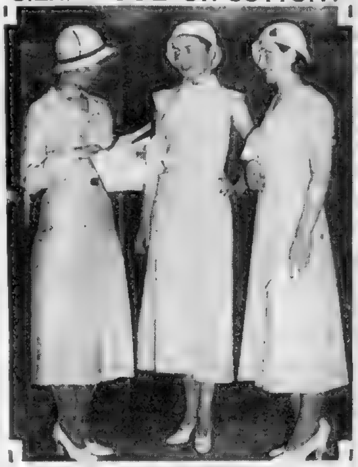
SILK, WOOL OR COTTON?



Fabric fashions showing in the R. H. White Co. Fabric Show to be held tomorrow and Thursday. Left to right, novelty eyelet Shantung dress featuring pleated skirt, novelty mesh pique dress featuring wide shoulders and sore throat scarf, and garment that shows that seersucker is back in shirtwaist frocks.

MARCH ARRIVES 'LIKE A LION'

March came in like the proverbial lion today with a northeast storm that swept out to sea

Storm warnings were ordered posted from Eastport Me to Sandy Hook, N. J., by the weather bureau at Washington at 9 30 a m. The warning said the storm would diminish tonight

Snow started to fall at 5 a m and swirled briskly for three hours on land and continued heavy as it went to sea. The observer at Highland Light reported no visibility and a wind velocity of 40 miles at 8 a. m.

The storm brought an exceptionally high tide and the stranded trawler Flow was floated in the harbor. She ran aground last night

Tomorrow will continue cloudy the Weather Man said, with a possibility of a drop in temperatures

SUSPECTS HELD AFTER CHASE

Two suspects were arrested in City sq., Charlestown, early today after police of five communities had taken part in a chase of three young men who held up a chain store in Beachmont and robbed the manager of $100

The capture was made by officers of Station 15 in Charlestown

The suspects gave their names as Irving Berlin, 21, of Essex st and Samuel Haught, 20, of Shawmut st., both of Chelsea

Holdup men had walked into a store at 46 Dolphin ave., Beachmont, last night, and had held up Ralph Jacobson, store manager. As they fled a bystander took the number of their car. Once it was seen in the outskirts of Salem and got away; again it was pursued from Swampscott toward Lynn, and lost.

Heads Drive

Frederic S. Snyder, director of the Massachusetts Anti-Hoarding Campaign, which gets under way throughout the state next Monday.

ANTI-HOARDING DRIVE READY

With the slogan, "Put the idle dollar to work," the Massachusetts Anti-Hoarding Campaign in conjunction with the national movement sponsored by President Hoover will officially open next Monday

Frederic S. Snyder state chairman announced the [illegible] of campaign headquarters in Room 1631 Chamber of Commerce Building 80 Federal st. Louis W. Munro assumed charge as executive vice-chairman of the drive

Snyder outlined the objectives of the drive as restoration to circulation of hoarded money prevention of further hoarding, encouragement of normal use of legitimate channels of deposit, and finally for the more wary, buying of the new treasury "baby bonds"

Banks will have on hand applications for the purchase of "baby bonds"

MAYOR LAUDS BLUE BLADES

The new blue blade manufactured by the Gillette Safety Razor Company gives assurance of greater comfort and better shaving service, Mayor Curley told representatives of the concern who were his guests at City Hall today.

The visitors, James Flaming sales manager of the concern, and Walter Scott sales promotion manager, told the mayor of the many improvements made in the new blue blade and presented him with a year's supply of them

"Boston has always taken pride in the Gillette Safety Razor Company," the mayor told his visitors. "From its inception the company has been financed and officered in great measure by New Englanders.

"I am a user of the Gillette razor and of the blades manufactured by your concern. I rejoice that your newest blade makes it possible to enjoy shaving to a larger measure than has ever been previously known. I heard your new blade discussed favorably in New York early this week. Your blue blade gives assurance of greater comfort and better shaving service."

FABRIC SHOW AT WHITE'S

Weaves most unusual so that cottons and silks look like woolens and vice versa, with color as the keynote and color contrasts offered interesting uses will be the theme of the specially staged Fabric Fashion Show at R. H. White Co. Wednesday and Thursday at 12 30 and 3 30 p. m.

Living models will parade "down the marble stairs" on the street floor, demonstrating how fashionably, practicable and economical women can be this spring in the newest styles.

Such interesting new weaves as wide cotton mesh coating, crinkled silk crepe diagonal ribbed silk printed stiffened chiffon, sheer woolens for suits, seersucker and novelty pique mesh will be featured

Plans for the show have been in the making for weeks and Miss Lilian Becket, stylist for the R. H. White Co., will lecture each day

RELIGIOUS TOLERANCE TO BE URGED ON AIR; CHURCH LEADERS BROADCAST VIEWS OVER WIDE HOOKUP

By N. F. T

Newton D. Baker is the principal speaker when pleas for religious tolerance are made before The National Conference of Jews and Christians, held in Washington this and next week.

• • •

Leaders of the Protestant, Catholic and Jewish faiths will address the gathering. Their addresses are being transmitted by special NBC lines to a nation-wide air audience on March 7th, most likely through WBZ here. On March 9th, there is to be an additional appeal made at 10 30 p. m., with WEEI likely to bring the feature to New England listeners

ANTI-COMMUNIST SPEECH

An unusual offering for tonight is the presentation arranged on WBZ at 10 p. m. The Anti-Communist League sponsors Mr. Alexander Lincoln, constitutional lawyer of note, who speaks on Communism and The Constitution. He will be introduced by Charles F Hurley, treasurer and receiver general of the Commonwealth

PERSONALITIES ON THE AIR

In 1926 there were 735 radio stations in the U. S. Today there are only 420.

Yet they tell you radio is in its infancy and is growing all the time. Uhuh, growing smaller

The "infancy" must refer to the noise radio makes.

In six yrs. 315 stations quit the air.

Hmm. That was just about the time the "crooner rage" started. Figure it out.

DOWN IN FRONT! A dancing chorus takes to the R. Vallee p'gram Thurs. . . . NBC is starting a wholesale shift of p'grams. Stebbins Boys shift networks and time to 7 30 starting Mar. 14. And Elsie Janis moves from 7:45 to 7 15 each Wed and Fri. . . On the Quarter-hr. vaudeville show it isn't Mort Downey or the fat boy that's swooning them into the isles but Tony Wons acting out a Shakespearian role . . . A tobacco co. is about to sponsor Lawmakers Simeon Fess and Jouett Shouse who will discuss politics . . . CBS is asking a juicy figure for sponsoring Bing Crosby which will retard action . . . Ethel Barrymore Colt speaks over WNAC at 8 this eve.

A local no-it-all calculates that before 1935 there'll be 1000 stations in the country.

If so, they'll have to add letters to the alphabet. As it is now there are hardly enough alphabetical combinations to go around for the b'dcasters

BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Eve American love, courtship and marriage counsellor, now heard three times wkly in an a. m. NBC series, will add an eve. period in which she will discuss love problems of men . . . James L. Barton, president of the Near East Relief Foundation, will speak on Sino-Japanese situation on WEEI Sat. This is the second in a series which WEEI hopes to extend from time to time . . . Hank Simmons' Showboat, without Hank Simmons will start a WNAC series Mar. 18 . . . WNAC's Tipplers are searching for a piano accompanist . . . WBZ believes Jimmie Rogers, singing pianist who starts a series at 7:15 tonight, is destined for network stardom . . . If Lawrence Tibbett wanted to hear himself he should have tuned to WNAC Sun. and listened to Ranny Weeks singing "When I'm Looking at You" . . . Bet your all that when Charles Goldberg, N. E. mgr. for Harm Music, was interviewed on the Tattler yest'y every celeb in town was listening and shivering. Because Charley knows more about the celebs than everyone but the columnists (?) . . M. 'BAD WILLIE' GRAY TO BE SHIFTED FROM HOSPITAL TO JAIL

POLICE TO TAKE NO CHANCES WITH BANDIT

Escapes From Other Hospitals and Jails Result in a Close Watch on Stickup Man

Despite his two bullet wounds, police will take no chances with William E. "Bad Willie" Gray, escaped convict desperado captured yesterday, and he will be moved late today from City Hospital to Charles st. jail.

Gray once escaped from a Lewiston, Me., hospital while under guard and before he broke jail in Portland last summer he had made two previous attempts there and one unsuccessful attempt in State Prison in Charlestown.

Capt. John M. Anderson and Inspector James Dennessey went from headquarters to the hospital today to arrange for his removal to the jail.

His sweetheart, Mrs. Ruth Ryan, who was taken with him when a police squad shot them out of hiding in Greenfield, N. H., is still in custody in the Brighton station but probably will be released.

DOCTOR HUNTED

Neither from him nor from Gray have the authorities been able to learn the identity of the Boston doctor believed to be located in the Back Bay who treated Gray Friday night for bullet wounds and on Saturday went to Greenfield to attend him.

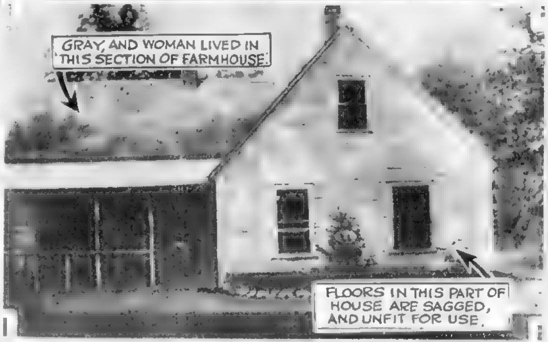
Gray will be charged with robbery while armed and assault with intent to kill Sergt. Philip Sweeney, railroad detective, wounded in the Allston gun duel.

Gray told police that after the holdup he was rushed to a hiding place here and on the following day was taken to the camp at Greenfield. A Boston doctor, whom he would not identify, was brought there to treat him. The doctor extracted one slug from his knee but could not reach the other bullet in his thigh with a probe.

BACK BAY PHYSICIAN

Gray resisted all efforts to learn the doctor's name, but they are convinced he is a Back Bay physician who has long been suspected of treating wounded criminals without reporting to police. Police stated that the doctor is reported to have become wealthy through his services to wounded gangsters.

BANDIT'S HIDEOUT IN TRAGEDY HOUSE



GRAY, AND WOMAN LIVED IN THIS SECTION OF FARMHOUSE.
FLOORS IN THIS PART OF HOUSE ARE SAGGED, AND UNFIT FOR USE.

Ancient farmhouse, over 150 years old, in Gulf rd., Greenfield, N. H., where "Bad Willie" Gray, Allston stickup man, and his sweetheart, Mrs. Ruth Ryan, were captured by Boston police early yesterday while guns roared. They were using the first floor in the ell, the other part of the old building, dilapidated and its floors sagging, being unfit for habitation. Many years ago a man who lived in the old place was murdered, but the mystery was never solved nor the slayer ever found. (Staff photo.)

GRAY CAME OUT WITH HIS HANDS HIGH
LAST FRIDAY NIGHT BASWELL WOUNDED DETECT. SWEENEY FOUR TIMES IN AN ALLSTON HOLDUP.

William E. Gray, photographed at the Brighton police station after his capture in New Hampshire for a store holdup in Allston, is now in City Hospital being treated for wounds received in a gun battle with a railroad policeman. Mrs. Ruth Ryan, Back Bay divorcee, trapped with him, is to be released today. Gray cleared her of connection with his career of crime.

COUPLE ASK TO ADOPT GIRL

A petition has been filed in Norfolk Probate Court at Dedham by Curtis Forbes and his wife, Martha F. Forbes of Adams st., Milton, requesting that they be permitted to adopt Edith Weber, [illegible] Boulevard Michel, Paris, France.

The young woman, according to the petitioners, was born in Dusseldorf, Germany, October 27, 1905, and was the daughter of Gustav Weber of [illegible] Hannover, Germany, and his wife, Wilhelmina Weber.

The Forbes, in addition to asking to be permitted to adopt the young woman, wish to have her name changed to Dita Kenya Forbes. The petition is returnable the second Wednesday in March.

Mr. Forbes is the son of the late J. Malcolm Forbes and is a cousin of W. Cameron Forbes, United States ambassador to Japan. He was graduated from Harvard in 1904 and for the past six years has been living with his family in Berkshire, Eng. His wife was Martina de la Fruglave and they have three children, Misses Edith, Marguerite and Dona. The identity of the German woman he has petitioned to adopt is not known to his relatives in Milton.

ADAMS FIGHTS PLAN TO TAX CHAIN STORES

Head of First National System Declares the Cost Would Fall on Consumers

[illegible] taxation by Charles F. Adams, treasurer of First National Stores, Inc.

"The reason I am opposing this proposed legislation is because it would be passed on to the consumer in the form of higher prices on food," said Mr. Adams.

"If you wish to put on an excise tax, equal to all stores, whether independent or chain, I will not oppose it, but I will oppose a tax that means increased prices on foodstuffs to those who can least afford it.

"Ninety per cent of this proposed tax would fall on foodstuffs and as 90 per cent of the customers of chain stores are wage earners it would mean that the bulk of the tax would be passed on to them.

"Eighty per cent of the proposed tax would eventually be paid by persons of moderate means as every tax, in the last analysis, is a sales tax.

"We pay more than $600,000 in import duties, taxes, licenses, etc., to the federal, state and local governments at the present time.

"I wish to refute the statements of proponents of the bills that the employes of chain stores are paid less than those in independent stores. The average wage of the national chain stores is $1[illegible] as against the national average of $1[illegible] for the independents. In Boston the average wage of the chain stores, not including executives, is $1538.50 as against $1521.50 for the independents.

"As to the argument that chain stores sell goods at below coast, I wish to say that the chain stores consider that bad ethics and never do so except when forced to do so by independent competitors. Generally speaking the chain stores have subscribed to the belief that it is bad ethics for them to follow such practice.

"A tax on chain stores would throw more stores into the losing class. During the quarter ending June 30, 1931, 370 New England stores of my organization lost money—a total of $111,715. The reason we continued to keep those stores open was we desired to keep persons at work and also because we thought they might return to the paying class with returning prosperity."

A & P STORES IN NEW ENGLAND DRIVE

The New England division of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. launched today a campaign designed to benefit New England producers of New England foods and groceries and to bring prosperity generally to New Englanders.

Throughout the month of March the New England division of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. [illegible] stores will feature products of New England manufacturers, farmers and other New England producers.

As an indication of its own faith in New England the A & P calls attention to its expenditure of more than $7[illegible] in New England during 1931 which includes $[illegible] worth of New England [illegible] purchased for sales in the organization's 16,000 stores throughout the United States.

In a statement on the campaign for New England, President William J. Davidson of the New England division said today:

"Our company is glad to make this effort to arouse the people of New England to a realization of the power which this section has in restoring prosperity, not only in our own communities but also in other parts of the country.

"Unemployment and distress in New England are less severe than in some other parts of the country.

"Out of our population of ten millions of people, there are only a few thousands in need of help. If the millions who have made money will spend it for the things they need and will spend liberally, employment will be provided for those who are not now at work.

"During the quarter of a century that I have been a resident of New England and active in the Tea Co. business, I have never found the people of this section unable or unwilling to meet any crisis courageously and victoriously.

"I believe that New England will respond whole-heartedly to the suggestion that they buy more New England products. It is not important where these products are purchased. The big thing is that we shall all of us buy, and buy liberally, of the things which we ourselves are producing."

MURDER OF THE NIGHT CLUB LADY

Doctor Multooler gave a helpless look at the ceiling.

"All right," he promised. "There goes my New Year's party—but I'll promise to have the findings on your breakfast table."

[illegible] minutes afterward the Assistant Medical Examiner began to remove the [illegible] from the body of Lola Carewe.

Meanwhile, under Colt's crisp orders, [illegible] the police energetically [illegible] One detective was dispatched at once to the Ashton [illegible] there to wait for the arrival of [illegible] of Christine Quires.

[illegible]

"It may look like we're moving too fast before the autopsy results are known, but we dare not waste time. There have been three strange deaths in this penthouse—a dog, a parrot, and a girl. After the body is taken away, I want the place searched still a third time—by the whole crew—to find out if Christine Quires is hiding here."

"Just what I was about to suggest," approved Dougherty.

Colt hastened on:

"Get all of Lola Carewe's private papers that are in the apartment. Samples of Lola's handwriting without fail. And samples of any others you find. Especially Christine Quires'!"

That meant that when the word was given, Center Street ferrets would be [illegible] in the apartment [illegible]

A [illegible] was [illegible] maid, whose [illegible] eyes gazed passively up at the Commissioner.

Eunice was a frightened squirrel of a girl. Shock had [illegible] tied and with [illegible] gested a trapped animal. She answered the questions put to her by Colt with nods and gulps. Her full name was Eunice Theresa James. She lived with her parents at an address in Staten Island. Ever since coming with Lola Carewe she had remained in the penthouse a permanent part of the menage. Her duties were those of a lady's maid. She was deeply attached to her mistress. Lola Carewe had been very kind to her. [illegible]

[illegible]

"Have you any suspicions of how the parrot and the dog died?" Colt asked.

"I don't know a thing about it."

"Have you heard any quarrels in this house?"

Even frightened as she was, the [illegible] question.

"I didn't hear much else," was her reply.

"Hear any tonight?"

"Sure. I heard them all. I heard Mr. Rowland and Miss Lola having it hot and heavy. And also this afternoon I heard Mrs. Carewe and Miss Christine having it, too."

"And what could they be quarreling about?"

"I don't know. I heard Miss Christine say she had to have her money back. And Mrs. Carewe said it wasn't any of her business. And Miss Christine said it would have to be somebody's business. And Mrs. Carewe said to see Lola about it. And Christine said all right—if Lola lived that long. And Mrs. Carewe had hysterics."

"And when did you say this was?"

"Late this afternoon. Miss Lola was out. And Mrs. Carewe had just come home from the show."

Colt looked at the girl with a [illegible] of appraisal. [illegible]

"How did Lola and her mother get on together?" he next inquired.

"Oh, they quarreled and made up all the time. Just like all families. Lola said once that she could easily kill her mother—but she was awful mad, then, and that was a long time ago. Of late they seemed a lot closer. I don't know why."

"Do you remember ever hearing Lola Carewe express any fear of any particular person," asked Dougherty. "Did she, for instance, ever say she was afraid somebody might try to take her life?"

He could have made it so much easier for me. But I don't know as I care now.

"Well, to make a long story short, Uncle John died six weeks ago and left everything to Aunt Gracie. Now she says, she's going to do what she always wanted to. She sent me this car and she put $10,000 to my credit in the bank. And after next month, when I am graduated, she wants me to come and manage the whole business. MORE SUDS
LESS WORK

Here's a new and easy way to escape them

● It IS a heart-breaking task, washing dishes three times a day. No wonder women get the dishpan blues. But here's an easy way to escape them. It's a new soap discovery with an amazing sudsing power that makes sport of this hardest housekeeping duty. Its name is Oxydol and it makes 50% more suds—richer, speedier suds that make grease vanish suddenly and completely. In an instant dishes are gleaming bright with never a trace of clinging film. And it's kind to hands, because it contains only the purest materials, and because its extra suds speed up the job so that your hands needn't linger in hot dishwater.

New Oxydol makes the same rich extra suds in any water—hard or soft. Lively, plentiful suds are the important thing in washing. In fact, it's SUDS, not soap, you really pay for when you buy soap. Oxydol gives you more suds for your money.

Saves time and work on washday too

Extra suds make a big difference on washday. Oxydol suds SOAK clothes whiter and cleaner than weak, old-type watery suds can ever get them, even with hard rubbing. Ask your grocer today for Oxydol, in the orange and blue suds-bargain package.

The Bad Man of Mat. When Jack Went Blind.
He Wheels the Baby. Signor Ferullo Champ?
Ever Hear of Haines? Some Baseball Firsts.

Wherin We Ask You a Few Questions

ARE YOU AWARE THAT Charlie Strack, who is filling the late Stan Stasiak's shoes as "The Bad Man of the Mat," is a home-loving man who will talk about his [illegible] month old baby as long as you'll listen? . . . That like Stasiak, Strack is part Polish? . . . That he wheels his baby about the Fens every morning? . . . That he likes good beer and says it prevents his going stale? . . . Where does he get it? . . . Don't ask, Abe, don't ask . . . That Strack is a good cook? . . . That he just loves sauerkraut a la Polish cooked in brown sugar? . . . That, with the exception of beer, he is a total abstainer and does not smoke or chew or swear, so that you can hear him? . . . That Mrs. Strack and Mrs. Wykoff, whose husbands try to wreck each other [illegible] evening, are the best of friends? . . . That neither attend the wrestling matches in which their husbands participate? . . . That Wykoff is a gentleman farmer? . . . That he owns 2200 acres of Missouri farm land? . . . Has an 80-acre lake? . . . That he entertains sportsmen on his farm summer and winter?

"BAD MAN" STRACK IS WILD ABOUT SUMP'N!
"OOS 'ITTA DUMPLIN' IS 'OO?"

DID YOU KNOW THAT Kid McCoy's right name was Norman Selby, and that he was the son of a minister? . . . That Ray Ewry won 10 Olympic championships and Paavo Nurmi has one more Olympic title to win to equal Ewry's record? . . . That Monte Munn left the Nebraska Legislature to take up boxing? . . . That Roger Bresnahan was the first catcher to use shin guards? . . . That both Lon Myers and Charlie Sherrill, former Yale sprinter, American Ambassador and author, claim to have invented the crouch start? . . . Sprinters formerly started from a standing position? . . . One day at the beach Myers, to give a slower pal a handicap, consented to start on all fours? . . . To his surprise he found he could make a quicker getaway than from a standing position? . . . That was the birth of the crouch start?

ANYONE EVER TELL YOU THAT Jackson Haines, America's first fancy skating champion, was the idol of Europe and that in Poland they went so daffy over him they erected a monument to his memory? . . . That Haines taught the Austrians the art of fancy skating, and now an Austrian, Karl Schafer of Vienna, is teaching the Americans? . . . The big crowd who saw Schafer skate in the Boston Arena last Saturday night learned plenty? . . . That Texas is furnishing more recruits to the big leagues this year than any other State? . . . That old timers say there never has been a hockey player the equal of Hod Stewart? . . . That several American Olympians were injured when a huge tidal wave struck the Barbarossa which was taking the American Olympic team of 1906 to Athens? . . . That Dwight Davis, former governor general of the Philippines, was one of America's greatest tennis players?

IS IT NEWS TO YOU that Dempsey was partially blinded after both of the Tunney fights? . . . That Gene Tunney's real reason for giving up the ring was fear of losing his mind? . . . A wallop from a sparring partner once caused Gene to lose his memory for a whole day . . . It brought about his decision to permanently retire . . . Wonder if he'll tell about it in his autobiography? . . . That the Long Acre A. C. used to hold bouts in what formerly was a church in N. Y. and Jack Delaney trained in a Bridgeport gymnasium which once was a church? . . . That America's first Olympic team was composed largely of Bostonians? . . . That New Englanders and native born Irishmen furnished the bulk of the athletes in the first dual meet between America and England, the memorable New York A. C. vs. London A. C. games in [illegible]? . . . That for many years New England developed more big league ball players than any other section of the country? . . . And the greatest oarsmen?

DID IT OCCUR TO YOU THAT Sabino Ferullo has a good chance of becoming the next world's lightweight champion? . . . Sammy Fuller, as the ring world knows, Ferullo beat Tony Canzoneri in an overweight match in Boston and he may beat the titleholder in a match at the championship weight in N. York . . . That Ernie Schaaf has developed a lethal left hook to supplement his deadly right? . . . That Gene Venzke would run even faster if he was a better judge of pace . . . That the [illegible] year old Pottstown H. S. boy may get an athletic scholarship to a leading university? . . . That if Gene was as great a football player as he is a runner a dozen colleges would be tossing scholarships his way? . . . That the [illegible] Spencer jumps with a bare foot is his right foot [illegible] than his left in [illegible] the bar and he thinks because of spikes and sole he gains an inch with his naked hoof?

DID YOU NOTICE THAT Howie Morenz has struck his real hockey gait and once again is searing through opposing defenses like a tongue of flame? . . . That Joe McCluskey, the Fordham distance, runs so low it looks to the uninitiated that he is running on his heels? . . . That Joe ran in Casey meet in N. Y. despite heavy cold and now is in hospital? . . . That John McGraw is "sweet" on another Bay State backstop, Francis Healy, who a short time ago was stopping 'em for St. Jerome's Academy, Holyoke? . . . That Harvard lacks athletic stars but [illegible] of a well-balanced team has a strong chance in next Saturday's indoor collegiates? . . . That Penn and N. Y. U. are the teams Harvard will have to beat? . . . That a Carolina sheriff recently caught a perch that had swallowed a trout that had swallowed a perch? . . . That [illegible] Arena sold out for last Saturday's fancy skating carnival [illegible] the attendance at the tri-cornered college track meet in the [illegible] was disappointing?

Can You Imagine Art Shires Rooming With Al Spohrer?

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 1 (AP)—He's just a great big Irish boy with a shock of curly hair parted in the middle, a broad grin, a liking for cigars and unbounded confidence in himself. But he is none other than Art Shires and today his comeback after a year in double A company is the talk of the major league training camps.

[illegible] signed the American Association batting [illegible] last year there was much wagging of heads in big league company. Judge Emil E. Fuchs, the president of the Braves, and Bill McKechnie felt they were taking a long chance. Right now they are delighted with Shires and their bargain.

"Sure I like to clown," Shires told me as he blew himself to some smoke rings and settled back for just one more interview. "I've had a good time in life for a young fellow, done a lot of foolish things, lost most of my money—$7,000 of it in one chunk out in Hollywood about a year ago.

Plans to Make Going With the Braves

"Just tune in on Shires, they will tell you and let the lad rave. All right, I don't mind being kidded and doing a little myself but my job this year is to play the best ball of my life. Make no mistake about me clowning away my chances this time. It cost me a lot to learn some good lessons. I haven't had a drop to drink for months and you can go out and bet that Little Arthur is on his good behavior to stay there."

[illegible] where he

"Why shouldn't I get out and hustle?" asked Shires. "I'm only 24 now but I've kicked myself around and have been kicked. This may be my last chance in the big show. And it's a break for me that I landed in the National League and with this club. I was born near Boston, you know. The Judge and Bill McKechnie from the start have treated me as though they wanted me on the club and wanted me to make good. They are giving me a break now and I think I'm finally smart enough to realize it."

Al and Art Are the Best of Friends

Shires' roommate on the Boston Club is Al Spohrer, the backstop who was a knockout victim of the [illegible] when Arthur the Great embarked on a pugilistic venture, among the things that brought him into disfavor with the baseball magnates. Over their lockers in the clubhouse is a sign, "Shires, Sphorer and Company."

"I could always fight, remarked Art. "I would quit if I couldn't push over some of these birds they call heavyweight boxers nowadays. Hah, there's Shires bragging again. But, say, on the level, come out and see me play first base some time. And if you hear me wise-cracking, don't think I haven't got my eye on the ball."

Venzke Given Great Reception, but Can't Take Ring

Pottstown, Pa., March 1—Gene Venzke, who shattered the 1500 meters indoor record Saturday night in New York, was given the greatest reception in the history of this town on his return from Gotham.

Legion and police bands blared their welcome, and a parade was held with Gene riding in an open car.

Plans to present Gene with a diamond ring went awry when the A. A. U. advised that such a gift would be likely to cause trouble with the amateur board.

BOSTON PROS TO PLAY SUNDAY GAMES HERE

When the American soccer league schedule for the first half is released and it will be sometime this week, the Boston professionals will be scheduled to play Sunday games at home as well as Saturday.

The action of scheduling Sunday games in Boston is not so much because the local team desires it but because it will eliminate [illegible] so many road trips for the New York and New Jersey teams.

Prior to this the New Yorkers would come to New England for a single game on Saturday, but with Boston and also Pawtucket playing Sunday soccer the visiting teams can play a Saturday and Sunday game on practically the same expenses.

Although the Boston girls were playing well, they were no match for their British foes, who were at the peak of their games during the encounter.

LOUISVILLE SLUGGER CAPABLE

Jack Conway's Tip on Henry Firpo Proves Good

Jack Conway handed the boys a hot one when Henry Firpo of Louisville, unknown in Boston, stepped in and won from Leo Larivee, New England middleweight champion.

"This lad Firpo knows what boxing is all about," said Jack. "Did you notice how he kept Larivee off balance with his left and then rocked him with rights to the jaw? And they tell me Firpo is a much better scrapper than he looked against the New England champ."

By JACK CONWAY

Henry Firpo, Louisville slugger, is today ready to meet Gorilla Jones in a bout for the middleweight championship of the world following his 10-round victory over Leo Larivee at an Argonne A. A. show at the Arena.

Firpo showed enough fighting form in the closing round of his tussle with Larivee to give him a chance of winning from any of our carefree middleweights. Firpo outboxed Larivee by a wide margin during the first nine rounds. In the tenth bout the hard-headed [illegible] cut loose and dropped Larivee to the canvas with a [illegible] to the jaw.

Referee Joe O'Connor voted for Larivee, but Judges Al Bates and Frank Bonin cast their ballots for the clever and hard-hitting Firpo.

Firpo weighed 162, Larivee 161¼. Joe O'Connor refereed.

The opening round was tame. There also wasn't much action in the second heat.

The action picked up in the third session. Firpo snapped Larivee's head back with left jabs, and then pierced an opening for a smashing right hand shot to the chin.

Larivee fought from a crouch in the fifth heat in an effort to keep out of the way of Firpo's [illegible] left. Larivee looked better in the [illegible] when he went [illegible] a flock of punches.

Firpo scored with a solid right hand punch to the jaw in the seventh. He then turned Larivee halfway around with a left to the face.

Firpo sent a terrific right to Larivee's jaw in the eighth. Then he drove a [illegible] hook to the body.

Firpo outscored Larivee easily in the ninth. He outboxed the tired Larivee at long range and outfought him in the clinches.

BRAVES ROOKIE OUTFIELDER SHOWS SPEED

ECKHARDT IS GRACEFUL BALL HAWK

By JOE CASHMAN

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 1.—Big Oscar Eckhardt, only rookie among the Braves' outfield candidates, emphatically served notice on all assembled that he is capable of making a great bid to land a regular berth in the Tribal garden this season.

Reputed to be awkward in the field, the newcomer from the San Francisco Missions proved his [illegible] graceful and efficient and much faster [illegible] than [illegible] Wally Berger [illegible] who have [illegible] here [illegible] for the past [illegible].

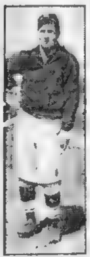
No batting [illegible] Oscar [illegible] his [illegible] with the [illegible] in fast company. A left-handed swinger, he led the Pacific Coast league in hitting last season with a mark of .366 and has rate [illegible] under .350 during his career.

Eckhardt Reputed to Be Speed Merchant

And those who have seen him in action say he can streak around the bases just as fast as Ben Chapman, Pepper Martin, Dusty Cooke, Jack Rothrock or any of the other famed diamond speed merchants.

All of which would ind[illegible] that if he is as good defens[illegible] as he appeared [illegible] the Red [illegible] to spend most of the [illegible] watching [illegible] perform.

McKechnie had [illegible] very [illegible] After [illegible] "If he is awkward so is a swan," said Bill. He judges flies very well, fields grounders like an infielder, gets a great jump on the ball, can cover half the outfield with his extraordinary speed and has a very good arm.



Oscar Eckhardt

"I can't imagine how he acquired the reputation of being a poor fielder unless possibly he frequently turns the wrong direction in going after a ball. I haven't seen enough of him to decide about that.

"If he hasn't that weakness and he hits as well as I expect, he can't fail to win a regular berth. For we need a left-handed hitter in the outfield—all our other fly chasers being right-handed strikers—and all the speed we can get."

Late Arrivals Risk Disciplinary Action

The few fielders who have yet to report are due today. With them may be Bill Sherdel, veteran southpaw, and Bill Hargrave, experienced catcher drafted from Baltimore, both of whom should have showed up [illegible] Sunday.

If some of the late arrivals don't hit town in time to work out this afternoon they will be excused, but disciplinary action will be taken against anybody who is not present for practice tomorrow morning.

It is a policy of the Braves management [illegible] contract. [illegible] answer.

"Jack challenged me to play golf," replied the mayor, "but I was unable to do so. Don't think I couldn't beat him at golf. I'm down around 90 and I don't carry my own score around the links either.

Sharkey Looking Forward to Schmeling Match

SHARKEY is al[illegible] for his bout with Schmeling.

"I only weigh 209 pounds," said Sharkey. "This means I have only ten pounds to take off between now and the time I enter the ring with the German.

"I am going to pick some quiet place for a training camp. I want to get away from crowds so that I can devote all of my time to training. I would like to get a spot where I can pass away my idle hours fishing or walking through woods.

"I have trained in the city and in the country for various bouts. I am convinced that the country is the only place where one can get into proper condition for a title contest. When I enter the ring against Schmeling I intend to be in the best condition of my career. I don't want to boot this chance to become champion."

"We have an expensive exhibition schedule this year," said John. "It is the most elaborate I have ever undertaken and I want the men to be in shape early because our schedule opens Saturday against the Cubs. I have never seen Walker, Mitchell, Mooney or Fitzsimmons in better condition. I think its safe to estimate our schedule will draw at least 100,000 admissions."

WEEPING OVER; ALL U. S. MORE CHEERFUL

By B. C. FORBES

You can now visit the financial Hub of America without being drenched [illegible]. Not only so, but business men from various parts of [illegible] that sentiment back home has noticeably improved.

One concern that supplies, among other things, collars, coats, etc., for dogs [illegible] a good deal of truth in the oft-repeated statement that "business has gone to the dogs." This manufacturer reports that "dog-gone business" is picking up.

I find that many of my friends are sick and tired of squeezing every nickel. They, especially their wives, are beginning to break out by making purchases beyond what is necessary to keep body and soul together. It isn't American to pinch pennies for very long.

Autos Must Be Bought Soon

In response to a request from the Post-Intelligencer in Seattle to wire a message for the annual automobile show in Seattle, I sent this:

> "More automobiles are being worn out than are being bought. This condition has lasted two years. It cannot last much longer. Admittedly, buying is still disappointingly slow, but is it not significant that the attendance at this year's automobile show in New York was 17 per cent ahead of last year, attendance in Brooklyn 62 per cent better, in Baltimore 69 per cent better, in Newark 35 per cent better?
>
> "America has keyed its modern mode of existence to personal transportation. We can no more do without automobiles than without shoes.
>
> "Rigid restrictions on credit should shortly be lifted now that so many powerful reconstructive-lending-forces are getting vigorously under way. People have the will to buy. The means to buy should improve during 1932.
>
> "Motor manufacturers have achieved more brilliant results than any other manufacturers in improving their product, enhancing eye appeal and bringing prices into harmony with today's pocketbook.
>
> "It still is emphatically true of the American people, 'they won't walk.'
>
> "Ford, after a long period of uncertainty and inactivity, all set to go ahead full blast. This should help not only Detroit and other cities having Ford plants, but the whole motor industry and the whole country."

Will banks and other institutions and organizations throughout the country please take a leaf out of the book of the Union Planters National Bank of Memphis? It is running invigorating advertisements in local newspapers. Here are extracts:

Example of Business Boosting

> "Memphis people cannot restore order in China, nor cure a revolution in Spain, nor alter the plans of Soviet Russia.
>
> "A large crop was made in this section, and at a low cost. Food and feed are in unprecedented abundance. While many incomes have become less, the purchasing power of the dollar has greatly increased. Some businesses are making good profits. And business, generally, is putting itself in rather liquid shape.
>
> "Our suggestion is merely this: Industry, thoughtfulness and resourcefulness have unusual value at this time.
>
> "Difficulties are not a new experience for the people of the South. Memphis has gone forward after Civil War, pestilence and flood. No one can doubt that it will strike its full stride again and furnish ample reward to the faithful."

Chance for Work Cleaning Cities

Work is scarce.

> "Why not a five-year plan to make America clean, tidy and orderly?" asks Theodore Schroeder. "Americans have drifted into habits of slovenliness and a shocking disregard for appearances. Let us make our cities and suburbs as well ordered, neat and tidy as, for example, similar places in Germany, England and Switzerland. This would provide lots of work."

In [illegible] are doing exactly that. Could not your city, your community stand considerable cleaning-up?

Financial News, Stocks, Bonds and Comment

STATE ST. Hears:

That the outlook is the same. A succession of quiet, colorless markets is expected to do much toward turning the eyes of the public to business instead of financial matters. In the end this will be best even though active traders are forced to suffer a period of irritating idleness. The only program of the latter can be that of picking up stocks on setbacks and accepting moderate profits on the bulges.

The Situation

So much has been written about valorization of commodity prices that subsequent failures to achieve stability of basic prices have thrown the word into disrepute in many quarters. Despite this, one broker thinks he sees an attempt on the part of big interests with the valuable help of powerful political forces, to valorize security prices. He points out that every important move so far this year has had as its object the removal of necessitous liquidation.

With liquidation sidetracked stabilization of security prices is well on the road to success. This is not the case when pegging of commodity prices is attempted. The difference is in the control of future supplies. New security issues can be kept off the market, whereas grains are continually in production and augmenting supplies. Again, the tendency at present is to reduce capital shares, and this is a further aid to those desirous of holding prices around current levels.

Aluminum

One of the most discussed stocks these days when traders and investors are gossiping about possible sensations in the next bull market, is Aluminum Co. of America. Not only does the magic name of Mellon attract, but the nature of the company's business is one that appeals to the imagination. Making a light metal that seems destined to replace steel in many lines it is particularly easy to elaborate a story concerning its old possibilities.

From an investment standpoint, the shares are faced with quite formidable barriers. Consideration of earnings in 1930 seems to indicate some time must elapse before anything is paid on the common. Reports of an even more disappointing 1931 do not enhance the outlook. Going into the capital setup, it is noticed that funded and preferred debts are large. Consequently, purchasers should consider the view of a Boston [illegible]. He says that the stock is [illegible] prospective uses of aluminum, even though it is not a bargain from a financial angle.

Egypt to Assist in Home Building

Washington, March 1—To alleviate a scarcity of workmen's residences in Alexandria, Egypt, the Central Government agreed to assume one-third of the cost to erect a number of cheap homes on a site which the latter turned over to the municipality for this purpose, according to a report from Consul H. Earle Russell, Alexandria, made public by the Department of Commerce. [illegible] financial condition of [illegible] Alexandria [illegible]

CHADBOURNE IN APPEAL TO SAVE SUGAR PLAN

By FRANK H. MELOON

Thomas L. Chadbourne

Thomas L. Chadbourne, traction magnate who devised a plan widely greeted as likely to rescue the sinking sugar industry, is appealing directly to the Cuban planters in an effort to carry on his constructive efforts. He wants the planters' consent to a reduction in the 1932 quota which he can place before President Machado of the Lone Star republic. Cuba and Java are divided on curtailment plans, it appears. Meanwhile, this week has already seen sugar futures selling at a new historic low, with March at four-fifths of a cent a pound.

• • •

Our own Federal Farm Board has been a keen advocate of curtailing American production in various crops. The idea does not appear popular elsewhere. Witness the reluctance of the rubber growers as well as the sugar planters, to carry on curtailment, despite low prices. Even the copper industry has so far failed to agree on a curtailment program sufficient to prevent the red metal from reaching another new historic low this week at 5½ cents a pound for domestic shipment delivered from custom smelters.

• • •

Odd-lot houses are raising the "differentials" on transfers of odd-lots. Why the rest of the country should pay tribute on sales and purchases to the Empire State is not entirely clear to outside observers. Take U. S. Steel for example. It is not a New York corporation. Why should Smith of Boston, who owns shares and sells them to Jones of Boston, pay any tax to New York state?

• • •

Automobile travel has long been possible on a time-payment basis, as applied to the purchase of the car, and in the Bay State to the payment of insurance. This plan is now to reach out over the waters. The Morris Plan Corp. of America and the Cunard Steamship Co. have concluded arrangements for financing European trips on a time-payment basis.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

LEADING dealers in bankers acceptances today reduced rates by ⅛ of one per cent on maturities of 90 days and above. This is equivalent to a rise in the current market price.

Under the new schedule the buying rates on maturities of 30, 60 and 90 days are 2⅝ per cent bid, 2½ per cent asked, 150 and 180 days 3 per cent bid, 2⅞ per cent asked.

This is the second reduction in rates within the past week, both being made to adjust the market for acceptances to the 3 per cent New York Federal Reserve rediscount rate adopted last week.

A. T. T. Earnings Cover Dividend

Latest estimate on American Telephone's 1931 earnings indicate about a five-cent margin per share above the $9 dividend.

Europe Again Seen Buying U. S. Stocks

Reports are again current of European demand for American stocks. The buying is said to represent a continuation of that reputed to have first appeared a fortnight ago with the introduction of the new Federal Reserve banking program. Much of this is believed to be for the purpose of establishing new speculative positions on the hope that the more liberalized credit powers of the reserve system will eventually produce its expected effect on general conditions in this country.

Similar Buying After Moratorium

Similar buying came into the market after the Hoover moratorium plan was announced last June. So far, however, the increasing attention presently developing in American securities abroad has had no noticeable effect on domestic sentiment. Investors and speculators alike continue to mark time, apparently preferring to proceed cautiously pending further developments.

Speculative Demand for Omnibus Corp.

Reported 62 cents a share earnings for Omnibus Corporation last year has awakened speculative demand for the stock.

Gold Dust's Year and Dividend Talk

Notwithstanding Gold Dust's comparatively excellent financial report for 1931, a reduction in the common dividend to $1.60 annually is shortly anticipated. The statement for last year showed that despite retirement of all bonded debt cash and marketable securities rose $1,194,000 while inventories were marked down $2,948,000. Net quick assets after allowing for the entire issue of $6 cumulative convertible preferred stock, amounted to $4.46 a share on the outstanding common stock against $4.8[illegible] a share the year before.

Oil Stocks Lack Real Sponsorship

Lack of real sponsorship has reduced speculative attention in oil stocks to low ebb. For a brief interval late last year the group gave evidence of reviving because of a better feeling in the petroleum trade. However, with the petering out of this temporary sentimental improvement, the principal share issues have lost market prominence. At the same time, nevertheless, some circles maintain an undercurrent of optimism toward the group because of its thoroughly deflated condition and a belief that it could respond quite eagerly to new favorable developments.

BOSTON STOCKS MOSTLY OFF

Stocks were mostly lower in today's transactions on the Boston Stock Exchange with changes for the most part limited to a narrow range. Inactive Waltham Watch prior preferred was a feature with a drop of 45 points on a single sale of 50 shares.

Mergenthaler dropped 6 points to a new low for the year while Westfield Manufacturing was down a point to a new low for the year. Hygrade Sylvania sagged around 2 points. Boston Elevated eased a point.

Recessions of minor proportions were shown for New England Telephone and Pennsylvania. New Haven and Edison were unchanged from previous closing levels.

Minor gains were shown for Atchison, American Telephone, Gillette, First National Stores and Torrington. Boston & Maine A first preferred was down 17 points.

Directors of the Boston & Maine Railroad Co. have deferred action on the quarterly dividend of $1.75 on the 7 per cent prior preference stock, due at this time, it was announced today.

Diesel-Electric Is Tried in England

Washington, March 1—A Diesel-electric railcar, in a trial run over a section of the London & North Eastern Railway Co. track established satisfactory time records, according to a report from Consul William F. Doty, Newcastle-on-Tyne, made public by the Commerce Department. The section of the line used has very steep gradients, the report said. The Diesel-electric railcar averaged 23 miles an hour on the grades. A speed of 60 miles an hour was frequently reached on level portions of the line by the new type car, the announcement said.

Total Sugar Melt Below a Year Ago

New York, March 1. Sugar melt of 14 United States refiners from January to February 20 totaled 450,000 long tons as against 500,000 tons in the like period of 1931. Deliveries totaled 395,000 long tons, as against 460,000 a year ago.

EDISON'S NET FOR YEAR SETS NEW PEAK

Edison Electric Illuminating Co. of Boston reports operating revenues for 1931 set a new high mark, about $200,000 above those for 1930.

The actual figure for 1931 was $30,815,429 compared with $30,617,180. Income available for dividends, depreciation reserves and surplus showed the slight decrease of about one-sixth of 1 per cent, or from $10,069,303 in 1930 to $10,052,149 in 1931. These results were accomplished in the face of the combination of a rate reduction and a severe business depression. The last rate reduction went into effect Sept. 1, 1930, and of course figures for 1931 must be compared with a year (1930) in which for eight months the old and higher rates were in force.

There was a slight increase in number of stockholders during the year, to 15,106 as compared with 14,952 a year ago. Amount of the company's stock held in Massachusetts is 461,003 shares, or 86 per cent of the total.

Boston Edison Co. has no set rule or rate for determining the amounts to be credited to depreciation reserves, but at the end of each fiscal year transfers to the credit of this account whatever amount is authorized by the executive committee. For the 1931 year, the amount so appropriated was $2,750,000 compared with $2,650,000 in 1930; $3,300,000 in 1929; $3,950,000 in 1928; $3,200,000 in 1927 and $2,300,000 in 1926. Amounts actually charged to depreciation reserve during 1931 totaled $1,691,506 against $1,806,091 in 1930, $2,348,294 in 1929 and $2,358,981 in 1928.

After deducting amount actually charged to depreciation reserves, the 1931 earnings were equal to $15.63 a share on 534,875 shares of stock compared with $15.44 in 1930 and $15.35 in 1929 on the same stock and with $15.22 a share in 1928 on 533,875 shares. With the $2,750,000 appropriated for depreciation reserves deduction from 1931 income the balance was equal to $13.65 a share on the stock.

SPECTATOR Says:

The stock market continues to drowse along as if in a trance. Reactions are of no more significance than strength in view of dullness of trading. The average trader is still in the "cheering section," with the professionals scalping it out; and it's a good place to be until the market shows something. The market, like the weather, goes into March like a "lamb." Wonder if either will come out the "roaring lion" of the old parable?

Here and There

Selling in U. S. Steel has been influenced by the heaviness of the preferred . . . Pittsburgh interests are picking up the common on a scale down . . . Outstanding strength in Canadian Pacific in the last two days has been due to London buying to replace stock sold at substantially higher levels . . . Some investment buying is reported in Consolidated Gas . . . The old pool is working Paramount again . . . Good scale buying is reported in Union Pacific.

One important development is that a real bond market seems to be shaping up for the first time in months . . . An offering of 10 bonds a couple of months ago brought a sinking spell in even high grade issues; now they are absorbed without much of a flicker . . . The bond market is highly artificial, it is true, in view of the "respiration" Washington has been giving it, but at least there are fair bids in now for important issues . . . Which looks as though the old cycle is working out again, that improvement in securities will have to start first in bonds, then go up the ladder to common stocks.

Dividends

Johns-Manville Corp. has omitted quarterly dividend of 25 cents on common due to be declared at this time. Regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 was declared on preferred, payable April 1.

• • •

Bendix Aviation Corp. declared a dividend of 15 cents on the common, payable April 1 to stock of record March 10. Previously the stock was on a 25-cent quarterly basis.

• • •

American Soda Fountain Co. is today paying a second dividend in liquidation of $2 per share to stockholders of record February 25. After the payment of this dividend the assets of the corporation will consist of returned goods and receivable items of a book value of approximately $50,000 (nearly one-half of which receivable items are more than 60 days overdue), real estate in St. Louis which though assessed for $11,700 is of doubtful value, and a small amount of cash.

The first dividend in liquidation of $2.50 and one share of preferred stock of United American Soda Fountain Co. was paid to American Soda Fountain stockholders in July, 1931. Further liquidating dividends will be paid as the corporation's assets are realized upon.

SUPPORT GIVEN TO LEADERS IN WALL STREET

New York, March 1—Important shares started the new month generally higher on the New York Stock Exchange today. Announcement of omission of the common dividend by Johns-Manville caused the stock to run off more than 3 points and this proved arther unsettling for a time to some of the rest of the market.

Support appeared and the list showed mixed price changes. Auburn Auto was up more than 4 points in afternoon trading, while U. S. Steel sold fractionally higher.

ATCHISON MOVES UP.

Atchison moved up more than a point at the same time, while American Ice sold up nearly 2 points. Setbacks of a point or so came for Warren Pipe, Liquid Carbonic, Hershey, General Printing Ink and Bendix. Bendix was off on its dividend, lowering to 60 cents a year from $1 paid previously.

McCrory preferred sagged 5 points. Bonds showed mixed trends, but U. S. Government issues nearly all moved higher.

Although the full benefits looked for fro mthe Glass-Steagall bill and other banking legislation are not expected to be felt before the end of this month at the earliest, reports received thus far have been moderately encouraging to bankers.

A summary of their reports showed today that considerable progress is beng made in the national effort to lure hoarded money back to the banks. A lively market is said by some to be in waiting for the government's new "baby bonds," which soon will make their appearance.

Business sentiment has been materially helped by the abatement in recent pace of bank suspensions.

BEAR QUERY IS BRAKE

Stock market activity, it was believed, would be restricted somewhat, pending outcome of the Senate's investgiation into short selling.

The weekly reserve board condition statement showed little change in trend as as yet—member bank loans and investments decreasing $125,000,000 and borrowings from federal resreve banks declining $15,000,000.

Continued evidence of reassuring worldwide response to the recent lowering of the New York federal reserve bank's rediscount rate was again furnished in the foreign exchange markets. Sterling cables opened at $3.48⅝, up ⅛; French francs were off one sixteenth to 3.93½ cnets.

United States' investments in Canada total $3,726,745,000, against $2,228,024,000 held by British investors and $171,188,000 held by other fgoreign countries.

Paul H. Nitze will succeed Frank T. Hulswit as director of United Light & Power Co. Nitze will represent United States & International Securities Corp. which recently acquired holdings of American Commonwealths Power Corp. in United Light & Power.

Sellers Manufacturing Co. of Chicago, makers of railroad supplies, have resumed operations after year's shutdown. Independent Steel Mill, employing 400 men when in full operation, has received sufficient orders to reopen, with more than 200 workers.

BOSTON STOCK COSTS RAISED

Boston Stock Exchange says that in view of the increase in stock transfer taxes the odd-lot committee has ruled that effective today, and until further notice, the differential on all odd-lot buy orders given specialists will be as follows: On stocks of $100 par value or of no par the differential will be ¼ per cent above the sale. On stocks of the par value of $50 or less, the differential will be ⅛ per cent above the sale, when the stocks are selling at less than $100 per share.

This change does not modify the rule that on all stocks selling at or over $100 per share, irrespective of par value, the differential will be ¼ per cent above the sale as heretofore. Neither does this modify the rule that on selling orders given the specialists the differential will continue as now, ⅛ per cent below the sale on all stocks selling under $100 per share, and ¼ per cent below the sale on all stocks selling at $100 par share or over.

So. California Has Net of $15,023,840

Pamphlet report of Southern California Edison Co., Ltd., for year ended Dec. 31 shows net of $15,023,840 after taxes, interest, depreciation, etc., the same as in preliminary statement, equivalent after preferred dividends to $2.53 a share (par $25) on 3,099,574 average shares of common outstanding during the year and $2.41 on 3,256,105 common shares outstanding at close of year, including 165,117 subscribed but unissued.

This compares with net in 1930 of $16,079,310, equal to $3.25 a share on 2,807,819 average common shares outstanding during that year and $3.09 on 2,953,180 common shares outstanding at end of year, including 179,925 subscribed but unissued.

Exeter & Hampton Earnings Greater

Exeter & Hampton Electric Co. (N. H.), reports for 1931 net income of $51,165 which is $6725 greater than in 1930. Concord (N. H.) Electric Co. reports for the 1931 year gross income of $170,895 and net income of $162,280, compared with $169,334 and $156,401, respectively, in 1930.

EXPORT COPPER 5¾ CTS. A LB.

New York, March 1 (AP)—Copper for export dropped to 5¾ cents a pound today, following the reduction yesterday of domestic shipments to 5½ cents, the lowest price at which the metal was ever available from first hands. The previous export rate had been 6⅛ cents a pound.

Leading copper interests resumed their conferences with the Belgian representatives, F. Pisart and Camille Gutt, today, in the hope of reaching some agreement regarding the export organization and also further drastic curtailment of output.

Fate of Copper Exporters, Inc., is expected to be decided soon, but some domestic producers do not believe any agreement with Europeans on a further reduction of output is likely. Consequently, it is the opinion in certain quarters that Exporters, Inc., will be suspended and the price of copper permitted to find its own level.

A price of 5 cents a pound has been forecast by London dealers.

More Locomotives in Need of Repair

Class I railroads on February 1 had 7331 locomotives in need of classified repairs, or 13.7 per cent of the number on line, according to the American Railway Association.

DARROW NOT HERO OF HIS OWN LIFE

By GILBERT SELDES

IT WAS NATURAL that Clarence Darrow's name should come up in connection with the Massie case in Honolulu; he is our great defender, he steps in where prejudice has been whipped into murderous fury, he defends murderers because he does not believe in murder, even the orderly official putting to death of criminals which, to him, is murder none the less. His greatest work has always been when popular clamor has been loudest—against him and his cause, as in the trial of Big Bill Haywood and in the Leopold-Loeb case. The ridiculous monkey trial of Dayton, Tennessee, was only a comic interlude which, in a well-arranged biography, would have come in the middle, and not toward the end, of a career.

GILBERT SELDES

"A Dead Man"

Darrow has just written his autobiography: The Story of My Life, published by Scribners. It is a good book; it leaves Darrow, by his own hand, less of a legend and more of a human being than he has been. One reason is that the hero of the book is not Darrow, but John P. Altgeld, the man who, as Governor of Illinois, pardoned the anarchists of the Haymarket riot—that is, those who had not been executed in the first fury of public opinion. The Haymarket case had the importance, in its time, of the Mooney case, or that of Sacco and Vanzetti. And the words of Altgeld are worth recalling. He said: "If I conclude to pardon those men it will not meet with the approval that you expect; let me tell you that from that day I will be a dead man."

Futility and Sadness

He was quite right. He was a dead man, and nothing in Darrow's book is more touching than the description of this dazed and defeated fighter whom he adored. Unless, perhaps, the saddest things are the philosophy of Darrow himself, his feeling of futility about his own work, his suspicion "that no life is of much value." Naturally he has a special interest in the law and a special sadness about it. "The whole material world has been made over," he says. "But the law and its administration have stood like adamant, defying time and eternity and all the intellectual . . . changes of our day and age."

I have said that Darrow is not the hero of his own book and I will come to the reason in a moment. He may yet be the hero of other men's books and I hope they will not romanticize him. I think I must be a little resentful over his indifference to himself. I remember the day Haywood was found not guilty; remember rushing to the telephone to give the good news to my father, and remember even my disappointment when I discovered that my father had also read the extras. I wanted, and I think most boys of fourteen or fifteen at that time wanted, to be associated, somehow, with Darrow in his triumph. But Darrow himself shows little sense of elation. He did what he thought was right. But to him his enemies were never devils, and the men he befriended and saved were never saints.

Who Was Responsible?

The key to Darrow's sadness is to be found early in his story. He was appointed acting corporation counsel in Chicago—his first great step in his profession. He asked the Mayor why he had been selected, and the Mayor said he had been impressed by one of Darrow's speeches. "How much had I to do with all this?" Darrow asked. And for a full page answers, nothing. He had nothing to do with his birth, he had nothing to do with the accident that made him come to Chicago, nothing to do with the invitation to speak, and, of course, nothing to do with the presence in the audience of the man who afterwards became Mayor. If you put it to him that he was asked to speak because he had a good mind and a fine delivery, he would say that these also were accidents. If you told him that the future Mayor remembered the speech because it was a fine speech, he would point out that a hundred generations of his ancestors, and a million circumstances of education and social life and physical health had made the speech a fine one.

With this philosophy Darrow should either have shot himself or become a dishonest lawyer and a voluptuary. What saved him was imagination. He could see other people as the victims of circumstances, the slaves of their heredity, and he was always willing to save them from the punishment society wanted to inflict on them as if they had wills of their own.

To Be a Jew

Jews on Approval, by Maurice Samuel, is an eloquent and angry book. It names names and few of them with respect. The theme of the book, which might have been more clearly stated, is that it is hard, but noble, to be a Jew. "In childhood and manhood we must carry the yoke which our forebears carried, and we must carry it gladly because the only alternative is an intellectual and moral leprosy from which there is no escape into death." These are the last words of the book; on the flyleaf a quotation from George Santayana announces the theme more eloquently: "Our distinction and glory, as well as our sorrow, will have lain in being something in particular, and in knowing what it is."

Anger and Sorrow

Mr. Samuel is thoughtful, indignant, eloquent. It offends him to hear, "All right, Rabbi, let's go," on the radio, and he despises the idea that the only duty and destiny of the Jew is to be nice, is to get himself liked. He makes the striking suggestion that, in many respects, the Jew of the Middle Ages, for all his miseries, was a better man than the Jew of today. In those days "the Jew never thought of getting himself liked"—that possibility was out of the question. He paid tribute to physical strength, but he kept his integrity, "and, therefore, his moral and intellectual condition compares favorably with that of the nice Jew" of today.

Credit Expansion to Aid Banks

The credit expansion bill sponsored by Senator Glass proceeds upon recognition of the fact that the banks have so completely surrendered to the single idea of preserving their liquidity, that they have, in large measure, CEASED TO BE BANKS in the true sense. Instead of meeting the acute need of credit, which more than anything else would relieve the present crisis, they have brought about almost a complete stoppage of credit, which is one of the major causes of the halt of business.

Senator Glass, in his Senate speech, did not spare the bankers. In referring to the conditions now prevailing, he said they "NEVER WOULD HAVE COME BUT FOR MALADMINISTRATION IN THE BANKING COMMUNITY"; and to show that the country is suffering, not from a shortage of actual credit but from the unreasonable withholding of credit by the bankers, he cited some amazing figures, which reveal the almost complete disuse by the banks of the huge resources for credit expansion which are IN THEIR POSSESSION.

In New York the banks which are members of the Federal Reserve have a total of United States securities and commercial paper eligible for rediscount of $3,136,032,000. But these same banks are rediscounting to the extent of only $95,764,000.

In Philadelphia the total of securities and assets available for rediscount is $573,961,000, but the member banks of Philadelphia are discounting only to the extent of $73,209,000.

In Chicago, the member banks of the Chicago Federal Reserve district have in usable securities $993,138,000, and are rediscounting to the extent of only $27,144,000.

The same relative DISCREPANCY BETWEEN REOURCES IN HAND FOR CREDIT EXPANSION and the OMPLETE DISUSE AND DISREGARD OF SUCH REOURCES prevails in the other Federal Reserve districts of chmond, Atlanta, St. Louis, Kansas City, Dallas and San ancisco.

Senator Glass summarizes this situation by citing the fact that the twelve Federal Reserve banks, according to the latest quarterly report, have usable paper in the immense volume of $8,561,628,000, of which they were rediscounting only $465,711,000.

> "In other words," according to Senator Glass, "the 7600 MEMBER BANKS HAVE FREE approximately $8,100,000,000 OF ELIGIBLE ASSETS, IF THEY WILL ONLY USE THEM."

The end sought by the Glass bill is to CURE THE BANKS OF THEIR TEMPTATION TO HOARD CREDIT in not using their eligible assets, by broadening the category of eligible assets and thus INSURING THE LIQUIDITY OF THE BANKS, WITHOUT THE STOPPAGE OF THE VITAL FLOW OF NORMAL CREDIT.

The situation which has arisen among the banks of the country, which Senator Glass speaks of as a COMPLETE CESSATION OF FUNCTION, was well described by Senator Robinson of Arkansas:

> "Each fear," said he, "feeds upon the other and gathers volume, so that the banks stop loaning, press collections, pile up money within their vaults, refuse to avail themselves of their eligible paper, and discontinue functioning. The communities are deprived of banking facilities. They gather fright, and the problem is constantly being augmented and intensified."

If our banks are to function properly in our scheme of things, they must be banks in every sense of the word, READY, ABLE AND WILLING to do their part and function as such. If the Glass bill can achieve this goal it will have aided greatly in lifting the business life of the nation back to Prosperity Paths.

Speaker Garner

"He Means What He Says"

A Washington correspondent of a New York evening paper writes:

> "It seems odd that John N. Garner should have been in the House for thirty years and yet should have been little known to the country until he became Speaker a couple of months ago. But it is easy enough to understand when you know the man. The last thing he ever thinks about is advertising himself. There is nothing of the actor about him.
>
> "He always means exactly what he says.
>
> "He never says anything for effect.
>
> "The only thing he considers in determining a course of action is whether it is right, and by right he means whether, as a Democrat, it seems to him to be in the public interest.
>
> "His mind is so constantly on his work in the House and so little clouded by the question of his own re-election or by public reaction to what he does that he makes it up with extraordinary swiftness and sureness.
>
> "It is not conscience, but front pages and direct primaries and elections that make cowards in Washington. And it is because he is so different from practically everybody else in Washington that he is making an unusual impression on the country."

This is by Clinton W. Gilbert, author of "The Mirrors of Washington."

No man actively engaged in public service could desire a higher tribute, and none but Speaker Garner would so well deserve it.

Dr. Clarence True Wilson

Law Enforcer

A warrant for the arrest of Dr. Clarence True Wilson on a charge of reckless driving has been issued in Portland, Ore.

Dr. Wilson is general secretary of the Methodist Episcopal Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals—which tells you what you shall and shall not do in most phases of American life. He thinks law should be enforced, and frequently says so.

We had supposed a speed law was "law," as well as the prohibition law, but apparently Dr. Wilson, who knows about such things, believes it isn't.

Motorists will be glad to have the point cleared up. "Dr. Wilson says it's O. K." can now be their retort to the traffic cop who wants to know why they are doing sixty instead of thirty —and it will be a rash cop indeed who will have any comeback when this eminent authority is cited to him.

New York Day by Day

Broadway Wit

NEW YORK, March 1—To old-timers the wit and caprices of Broadway today are shallow vaporings in comparison to the red-corpuscled mirth of other years—the years of the "flying wedge" of waiters at Jack's, the cartoonist table at Churchill's, the worldings about the Knickerbocker bar and the 42nd Street Country Club.

There was that glittering wintry morning at the Metropole bar when a comedian of the day lurched blearily in from a ten day joust with the jug, his clothes in spotty disorder. Falling asleep, Wilson Mizner hung this card around his neck: "The grandeur that is Grease, the glory that was Rum."

On another occasion a Broadwayite on a prolonged hurrah approached Mizner and flexing his muscles cried: "Feel, sucker! Sometimes I don't realize my own strength." Mizner replied: "I'll say you're a Sandow. Your breath alone would tilt windmills on a Dutch painting."

Also the actor who crashed every banquet. One night he drew his chair uninvited to the speaker's table and, when Willie Collier was introduced, began to heckle. Collier took it a while. Then: "I have a surprise, ladies and gentlemen. I take pleasure in presenting America's favorite pain in the neck."

In Jack's, one glowy midnight, came a prize fighter, handsome in a vacuous way. As he passed a table someone commented on his superb stature and poise. Frank O'Malley, looking him over, chirped: "I've seen better heads on dollar umbrellas."

Another evening O'Malley came upon the late Joe Drum, James Montgomery Flagg and George Buchanan Fife. "Ah," he exclaimed, "The Spirit of '76." Drum was sailing one day on a French ship. "I chose to cross with the gallant chevaliers of France," he said, "where there is no hanky-panky about women and children first."

Unusual figures drifted to bars and chop houses in those haphazard days. Paper Collar Joe, the wide-hatted confidence man; Appetite Bill, who could devour a large bowl of popcorn at one sitting, and Grand Central Pete, whose boast was he was "so tough his spit bounced."

* * *

In Considine's, one dusk, somebody in a lunatic seizure suggested cracking the tedium by visiting Chinatown and "knocking the gong around." Just for a thrill. Paul Armstrong, the playwright, demurred: "No opium for me," he said. "I have noticed that once you start playing faro you soon find yourself dealing."

Jack's was the rowdiest spot shortly before dawn. It churned with lusty drinkers frequently in belligerent moods. Jack Dunstan, himself, often had to resort to strenuous measures. One bully "roared in" at a Fourth of July sunup, waving a smoking six-shooter. As he rushed toward a table menacingly, Dunstan stuck both thumbs in a pot of English mustard, clapped them to the annoyer's eyes, and he dropped his gun and crashed screaming into a pillar of the 6th avenue El.

* * *

Another character, when Jack's lamps flamed brightest, was a garrulous lawyer bursting into oratory at slight excuse. Harry Reichenbach once summed him up with: "Any time you ask that guy how he is, he'll climb right up on a soap box and tell you."

But Broadway changes even in names. Rarely are there handles such as Slocum and Carter—names suggesting lace curtains, whitewashed yard rocks and aspidistras. Instead are stuffed shirts with pomaded pomp and Argentine unction, bearing such names as Carlos and Ferenc and suggesting the lowest of all crime—blackmail.

* * *

Add yokel yens: To basket picnic with the E. F. Huttons in the Grand Central rotunda.

* * *

Earl Carroll, George White and Florenz Ziegfeld, if they recognize each other in public, do so with a quick bird-like bow. Frequently they exchange bright colored rhetoric in the press. The other night they were trying not to notice one another at a party. All of a sudden everybody walked away, leaving them in an embarrassed huddle. Each grinned sheepishly. But no one broke the silence.

* * *

Harry Silvey phones breathlessly he hopes Hoover will not change sleds in the middle of the slide.

Telegram: "We have invented a cheap way of making caviar so it cannot be told from the real Russian article. Drop in and eat your fill."

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

How Come?

WHAT STARTED the present economic problem, any way? Everybody is asking that—saying it's so unnecessary; so cockeyed; no sense in our getting this way.

Aren't we the richest nation on earth? We sure are. Don't we make more things, use more things, than any other people? We sure do. And wasn't everything going jake with us for twelve years after the war, even though all the other nations were busted? Everything was.

Then why in heck did this thing happen? Hasn't anybody an answer?

Governor Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania has an answer; and there's no dark mystery about it.

The war started a lot of things; some good, some bad. Amongst them, one unprecedented thing—big wages for all the little fellows in American. Big enough wages so they could have things that the little fellows had never dreamed of having before—automobiles, radios, good clothes, houses of their own. Nice pickings for the little fellows. They started to spend—and how!

Nice pickings for the big fellow, too. Never before had he had such a market for his goods; and the more goods he made, the more market he had. All he had to do was to make the things and encourage the little fellow to buy them; then, automatically, the golden stream started flowing.

Extravagant? Sure it was. But that, alone, wasn't responsible for what happened. Extravagance, in itself, isn't an unmitigated evil. It may land certain idiots in the hole, but AS LONG AS IT KEEPS MONEY IN CIRCULATION, it puts the rest of us on Easy Street.

But right here came the hitch. We were putting money in circulation, BUT IT WASN'T KEEPING IN CIRCULATION.

Something was happening to that whirling, golden torrent. It was diminishing—narrowing to a trickle. Why? Had we grown sick of spending? No, we were as keen on spending as ever, and there were just as many things to buy, and just as much money in the country to buy them with. Then why weren't we buying?

BECAUSE, THOUGH THE MONEY WAS STILL IN THE COUNTRY, IT WAS NO LONGER IN THE RIGHT PLACE IN THE COUNTRY. IT HAD PASSED FROM LITTLE FELLOW'S HANDS TO BIG FELLOW'S POCKET—AND THERE IT WAS STICKING.

The thing was ironically simple. Big Fellow's prosperity had been based on Little Fellow's prosperity. If they could both stay prosperous, the boom days would go on. But the sight of that whirling, golden torrent had been too much for Big Fellow's greed. Each day he grabbed off more and more for himself—gave back less and less to Little Fellow.

A couple of simple statements tell the whole story.

IN THE TEN YEARS ENDING IN 1929, REAL WAGES INCREASED ONLY 13 PER CENT WHILE THE RETURNS OF ALL INDUSTRY INCREASED 72 PER CENT.

DURING THOSE YEARS THE WEALTH OF THE COUNTRY BECAME SO CENTRALIZED THAT ONE PER CENT OF THE PEOPLE OWNED 60 PER CENT OF THE WEALTH!

Now remember that wealth was still dependent upon the little fellow's spending; and if they could have gone on spending, the big fellows could have gone on piling up.

BUT INSTEAD OF HELPING HIM TO GO ON SPENDING, THE BIG SAPS DROVE HIM STRAIGHT ON THE ROCKS.

They decreased his earnings by pocketing more and more of the profits. They increased his obligations by unloading their taxes on him, including the Treasury Department to repeal excess-profit taxes and income taxes in the "higher brackets." At the same time they speeded up production regardless, expecting the little fellows to continue to consume.

What happened? The simple and inevitable thing happened. THEY KILLED THE GOOSE THAT LAID THE GOLDEN EGG.

The little fellows stopped buying. The factories shut down. The banks went broke. Then came the crash!

And that's why we have the present economic problem. WE HAVE IT BECAUSE THE BIG FELLOW WAS A HOG.

And hoggishness doesn't pay. You ARE "your brother's keeper," whether you like or want the job or not: AND IF YOU DON'T KEEP YOUR BROTHER, HE CAN'T KEEP YOU.

Just Folks

Undoing a College Education

One time there was a college boy, an honor student, too,
Who thought he ought to show the folks at home how much he knew.
With scorn for this and scorn for that, he filled his father's ear,
For having gathered knowledge he had also learned to sneer.

The youngster went about the town with a most superior air,
He couldn't stand the manner of the old friends living there.
He hated this and hated that; with a frown upon his face,
He called the neighbors vulgar and their notions commonplace.

One evening as they sat alone his troubled father said:
"I sent you down to college to gain wisdom, but instead
Unto my sorrow and dismay I find on your return
You've merely picked up tricks of pride which any boor can learn.

"You needn't go to college to discover things to hate.
To sneer at human failings is an art not very great.
The faults of other people even ignorant men can find—
Now take this tip from father—any fool can be unkind."

The Administration of Undertakers

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Boston Evening American.

THE PRESIDENT has sent Ernest L. Jahncke, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, to Ohio to tell the people that the human misery, the starvation, the collapse of business and industry, the loss of credit, the loss of foreign markets, are all due to the fact that twelve years ago the man who lifted Mr. Hoover from obscurity outside European circles and repatriated him was President.

Mr. Jahncke sneers at the Federal Reserve system, which is not surprising since the Republicans in Congress opposed its creation almost to a man.

He claims all the credit for all the things the Democratic House has done, and implies that, while the House has acted wisely, it has been because the American people, with unlimited confidence in Mr. Hoover and ardently devoted to him, would have risen in wrath had the House failed to support the President.

This smacks of the campaign methods of Mr. Hoover's friends in 1928—the lowest and basest and most dishonest in the history of American politics.

Perhaps the time has almost come for the Democrats to make reply and to use plain language in discussing the heavy contribution of the Hoover Administration of Undertakers in putting 8,000,000 bread-winners on the street, in placing 25,000,000 men, women and children in distress, in creating the treasury deficit of more than a billion, in destroying the foreign markets and turning against us the hatred of the world.

Some Plain Talking

There well may be some plain talking on the part the market-minded Administration of Undertakers played in creating the conditions resulting in the market panic of 1929. The utterly false statements given out to the inexperienced, under the authority of the highest offices, to encourage the continuance of the wildest debauch since the Mississippi bubble, can properly be resubmitted now by the Democrats.

The tariff, which has lost us our foreign markets, alienated the best customers we ever had, invited the retaliation of other peoples and contributed to the desperate condition of the railroads and ocean liners, while turning factory workers on the streets, should be discussed frankly in the light of its origin.

Leading manufacturers did not want it.

Bankers did not want it.

Economists said it would be ruinous.

Two-thirds of the press was against it.

And in the beginning Mr. Hoover did not want it.

But we got it—and why? Because the inspiring Mr. Grundy, with an ethical standard all his own, announced openly that he had collected millions of dollars from among his kind to elect Mr. Hoover; and, having paid for something, he expected the delivery of the goods. The President applied the lash and forced the delivery.

If the Democrats plan to wage a "dear teachers and kind classmates" campaign against the group represented by Jahncke's insolent tirade of misrepresentations and falsehoods they are licked before they begin.

The Credit of the Nation Is at Stake

The miserable mess into which the Administration of Undertakers has plunged the American people leaves us with an Administration deficit of much more than a billion dollars. The credit of the nation is at stake—we are actually fighting to keep Government bonds at par. This is the condition which the Administration of Undertakers has thrown into the lap of the Democratic House. This condition must be met; and having taxed everything taxable to the limit of reasonable returns, only to find ourselves $400,000,000 short, we are forced to the sales tax.

And having met this problem of the Administration of Undertakers in the only way possible or practical now, the Democratic House, seeking to save the credit of the nation endangered by the economic stupidities of the Administration, is met smugly by Mr. Snell, the Republican House leader, with this impudent and utterly demagogic statement:

> "It's my judgment that Congress should spend more time reducing Government expenses instead of spending so murh time trying to find new sources of revenue."

For three years the Administration of Undertakers spent no time reducing Government expenses while we were rushing into a billion-dollar deficit.

Just now the Democratic House is reducing the demands of the Administration of Undertakers in their estimates by millions of dollars.

And it is planning reforms in the executive departments—that the President had ignored, despite his campaign pledge.

The President "Deplored" These Speeches

Thus far the Democratic leadership in House and Senate properly has concentrated on constructive measures for the relief of business. It has frowned on mere attacks, insisted on the dispatch of important public business with the least possible delay, and made no mistakes in judgment or in method. But in the midst of its work the Administration of Undertakers sends forth its spokesmen, with the knowledge and approval of the President, with speeches soaked with misrepresentations and falsehoods, handled for the press by that Lincolnian figure, Mr. Lucas, to discredit the party that is seeking to wipe out the Administration's deficit.

When, after the celebration of Mr. Hoover's birthday—or was it Lincoln's?—when discredited members of the Administration of Undertakers delivered tirades against the only people who have done anything to meet the present crisis in the last three years, the President said, following the criticism of the press, that he "deplored" these speeches.

We pointed out in these columns then that it seemed passing strange that he deplored the speeches of his own subordinates; expressed the opinion that the tenor of them must have been known to him before; we called attention to the fact that they were sent out by Mr. Lucas, the President's man.

Now that Jahncke has spoken, reiterating, with new trimmings, the speeches of Hoover's birthday —or was it Lincoln's?—the public must be convinced that Mr. Hoover not only cannot control his own party but even his own henchmen. Either that or that the deploring of the President was in the Pickwickian sense.

It Seems Incredible

And yet it seems incredible that the President should have sanctioned the attacks upon the Administration of which Mr. Hoover was very glad to be a part twelve years ago, and the slurs upon the man who made possible his repatriation. No man living owes as much to President Wilson as Mr. Hoover; and by that token we prefer to believe that he has not sanctioned the far-fetched and absurd attacks of Mr. Hurley or Mr. Jahncke.

The speeches that the President "deplores" are a fair warning of the kind of campaign for re-election the President intends to wage. Perhaps the campaign of 1928 is not to be happily unique in American history. But in view of the fruits of the victory of 1928, the American people may have cut their eye teeth.
